Exhibit, more to honor Fort Fisher vets at 151st event

On Saturday, January 16, 2016, Fort Fisher State Historic Site will observe the 151st anniversary of the 2nd battle of Fort Fisher by unveiling "Distinguished by their gallantry in action: Fort Fisher's Medal of Honor Recipients." The program will feature compelling authors and speakers, dozens of Union and Confederate reenactors, special tours, and a new exhibit focusing on the 72 soldiers, sailors, and Marines who received the Medal of Honor for their actions at Fort Fisher near the end of the Civil War.

Free and open to the public, the program will be held from 10 am to 4 pm. The site will debut a new exhibit in the visitor's center concentrating on the 72 soldiers, sailors, and Marines who received the Medal of Honor from June 1864 to January 1865. Although never presented to their recipients, five Medals of Honor on loan from the U.S. Navy will be among the articles featured in the exhibit, along with two others.

Of course it wouldn't be an anniversary at Fort Fisher without ground-shaking cannon firings, so visitors can count on periodic blasts courtesy of the site's 32-pounder rifled and banded cannon, the site's 12 pounder Napoleon cannon and a 10-pound Parrott Rifle.

If you've ever had questions about Confederate currency, you won't want to miss the intriguing presentation by Buena, Vista, Va., native David Meisky, a reenactor and historian who portrays William "Extra Billy" Smith, a Confederate general, businessman, and politician.

A former history major at George Mason University, Meisky is retired from the Fairfax County, Va., Public Library and loves spending his time living in the past. Meisky will speak at 11 am in the site's auditorium. At 2:30 pm, local historian and author Richard Triebe, will discuss Fort Fisher POWs in the auditorium.

From the site manager, Jim Steele...

Dear Friends:

It is the New Year, and on Saturday, January 16 we will present our anniversary program commemorating the Battle of Fort Fisher. This will be the 151st anniversary; it is hard to believe the sesquicentennial series is now behind us. But we are not slowing down. This year you can look forward to Civil War Trust Park Day on April 2, Confederate Memorial Day service on April 30, and the 75th anniversary program commemorating Fort Fisher's role in World War II on October 15. And, of course, all summer long we will present our successful "Junior Reserves" children's programs and the "Beat the Heat" lecture series. We hope that you can make it to all of these great events.

Some of you may be aware of a tremendous change to our department. This winter it became official that elements of the Department of Environmental and Natural Resources have been transferred to Cultural Resources. We are now called the Department of Natural and Cultural Resources. Secretary Susan Kluttz explained "this realignment will allow the DENR attractions and the DCR assets to bring their collective expertise, experience and talents together to strengthen our wonderful properties and to engage visitors to experience the best our state has to offer." So we welcome North Carolina State Parks, Aquariums, the Zoo and Museum of Natural History to the family. I expect that all of our organizations will benefit from this collaboration, but especially those here on Federal Point.

In closing, I encourage everyone to become a member of the Friends of Fort Fisher. The Friends are key to everything we do here and your participation is crucial. If you are already a member thank you so much for your continuing support. Come see us soon!

Sincerely,
Jim

What's new in the Fort Fisher museum store? Why... THE OLD NORTH STATE AT WAR-THE NC CIVIL WAR ATLAS

The North Carolina Civil War Atlas is a comprehensive full-color study of the impact of the war on the Tar Heel State, incorporating 99 original maps. The only state-level atlas of its kind, the book is a sesquicentennial project of the North Carolina Office of Archives and History. The large format (11"x17") volume highlights every significant military engagement and analyzes the war's social, economic, and political consequences through tables, charts, and text. Manuscripts, election returns, newspapers, census records, and other sources were used to prepare the narrative and compile the tabulated data. Every significant Civil War military engagement in the state is highlighted in this lavishly illustrated, full-color, 200-page, hardbound volume. Available now in the Fort Fisher museum store for $85 per copy, plus tax. Get one now for the history lover on your Christmas list.

Park Day 2016

Join us for

As part of Civil War Trust Park Day 2016, individual and group volunteers are needed Saturday, April 2, from 8:30 to 1:00 pm to help beautify and preserve Fort Fisher State Historic Site, the largest earthen fortification in the Confederacy, which once protected the port of Wilmington and the vital blockade running trade on the Cape Fear River.

Civil War Trust Park Day brings history enthusiasts together in an effort to help keep our nation's heritage not only preserved, but pristine. Since 1996, the Civil War Trust has sponsored Park Day, an annual hands-on preservation event to help Civil War — and now Revolutionary War — battlefields and historic sites take on maintenance projects large and small.

Volunteers aged 10 and up, of all ability levels, are encouraged to participate. Many activities are appropriate for groups such as scout troops, service clubs, and church youth groups. Volunteers will be treated to a free t-shirt and lunch provided by the Friends of Fort Fisher (the non-profit group which supports the site and makes all programming possible) along with its sustaining members—Troy and Lori Barbour, Mike McCarley, Tammy and Jack Moore, Brian and Deedra Nunnally, Jim and Catherine Taylor, Patrick O. McCullough, Forrest Goodman, Jr., Wilson Grab, and Ivarlee E. & Thomas E. Mulligan.

All Park Day volunteers are asked to register in advance by calling the site at (910) 458-5538 or emailing john.moseley@ncdcr.gov. Gloves and tools will be provided.

Park Day is Saturday, April 2, 2016

Meet Capt. Thomas Taylor, trusted comrade of Col. William Lamb and master at running the blockade

Thomas Taylor was the super-cargo (owner's representative and load master) for the Anglo-Confederate Trading Company, one of the most successful blockade-running firms of the Civil War. Due in no small part to Taylor's resourceful vigilance the company's good fortune was remarkable.

In fact, the enterprise was so profitable that it is reported that in the fall of 1864 that the company paid out dividends to their investors amounting to 250 percent above the original cost of a share of stock. In the competitive high stakes business of blockade-running both Taylor and the Anglo-Confederate Trading Company flourished; and though the company never operated more than four runners at a time, over the course of the war its fleet of vessels would include the Banshee, Banshee II, Will of the Wisp, Night Hawk, Stormy Petrel, Tristram Shandy and Wild Rover. Excepting one late war run after the fall of Fort Fisher, all of Taylor's runs were either destined to, or departed from, Wilmington, North Carolina. In these comings and goings the solicitous association that he fostered with Fort Fisher Commander Colonel William Lamb cannot be overstated.

In his book, Running the Blockade, Taylor described the exhilarating task of entering the Cape Fear River through New Inlet during the war, "Now the real excitement began, and nothing I have experienced can compare with it. Hunting, pig-sticking, steeple-chasing, big-game shooting, polo – I have done a little of each – all have their thrilling moments, but none can approach running a blockade; and perhaps my readers can sympathize with my enthusiasm when they consider the dangers to be encountered, after three days of run on the blockade-runner Banshee, that twenty-one year old Taylor received his baptism of fire. It was also on this occasion that he first made the auspicious acquaintance of Colonel Lamb that was, "soon to ripen into a warm friendship." After all, it was the propitious flash and roar of Fort Fisher's guns, "like music to our ears," that dissuaded the pursuing Federal gun boats from continuing their chase of the Banshee. In fact he may very well have had this incident in mind when he wrote of Lamb, "...and many a smart vessel did his skill and activity snatch from the very jaws of the blockaders. He came to be regarded by the runners as their guardian angel; and it was no small support in the last trying moments of a run to remember who was in Fort Fisher."

So indebted and grateful to Colonel Lamb were Taylor and his employer that at Thomas' suggestion the firm subsequently presented Lamb with a battery of six Whitworth rifles. When harnessed to mules these long range field guns extended the reach of the fort exponentially.

They soon developed such a reputation both above and below the Mason and Dixon Line that until the fall of Fort Fisher the Confederates were successfully able to hold the Federal blockaders at bay.

Taylor would go on to complete eight round trip runs with the Banshee. When she was finally captured on her ninth attempt in November of 1863 the serendipitous Taylor was not aboard. By then, however, she had returned a 700 per cent profit to her English owners, and Banshee II had been completed and was ready to join the company's fleet of runners.

constant anxiety and little sleep in threading our way through a swarm of blockaders, and the accuracy required to hit in the nick of time the mouth of a river only half a mile wide, without lights and with a coast-line so low and featureless that as a rule the first intimation we had of its nearness was the dim white line of the surf."

blockade-runners to deliver their goods to Wilmington and successfully escape. After the war Taylor returned to England where he was given a partnership in the firm and a position in Bombay, India. He and Colonel Lamb (Taylor's "guardian angel of blockade-running") would remain in touch for many years to come.

Today, what was most certainly Colonel Lamb's personal copy of Tom Taylor's book, Running the Blockade is displayed in the Fort Fisher State Historic Site exhibit hall on loan from Mr. Larry Walker of Charlotte, NC.

NC Senator Brent Jackson (R-District 10) tours Fort Fisher, offers thanks and support for site's mission

The staff of Fort Fisher State Historic Site and several Friends of Fort Fisher board members enjoyed the privilege of hosting a visit by NC Senator Brent Jackson (R-District 10) and his staff.

Senator Jackson is co-chairman of the Senate Appropriations/Base Budget Committee, and the immediate past co-chairman of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Natural and Economic Resources and the Senate Agriculture/Environment/Natural Resources Committee. He is also co-chairman of the Joint Environmental Review Commission, Joint Agriculture and Forestry Awareness Study Commission and the Agriculture and Rural Caucus of the North Carolina General Assembly. Additionally, Sen. Jackson sits on the Senate Finance Committee, Rules and Operations of the Senate Committee and Senate State and Local Government Committee.

Accompanied by NC Historic Sites Director Keith Hardison, Sen. Jackson and his staff braved less-than-ideal weather conditions to tour a number of sites overseen by his committee, including Fort Fisher. Shortly after the tour, Sen. Jackson described his motives in a thank you note to site manager Jim Steele. He wrote, "Mr. Steele, thank you for the tour of the Fort Fisher Historical Site last week. It is great to have such passionate citizens. I was pleased to see the professional manner in which your operation is run – it is a true asset to the state. I believe that it is important for legislators to visit our state-owned sights and tourist attractions in order to gain firsthand knowledge of the facilities that are affected by our decisions. Our attractions are one of our major economic drivers and help support our large tourism industry. I appreciate the time you took to give us an in-depth tour and show us the behind the scenes operations of the fort. You all have done a nice job preserving the site and have an impressive wealth of knowledge about the fort and its history. Please do not hesitate to reach out to me or my office if we can ever be of service to you or any of your employees. Thank you, Brent."

Of this gesture—and for taking the time to see in person why Fort Fisher is the most visited state historic site in North Carolina—we say, no, thank you, Senator Jackson. Your support is critical and very much appreciated. Please come back and see us again soon.—The staff at Fort Fisher & the Friends of Fort Fisher

Unique volunteer opportunities await at Fort Fisher

Looking for a unique opportunity this summer? Know someone who might be interested in working at North Carolina's most visited State Historic Site?

One of the site's original volunteers, Mary Holloway, started conducting costumed guided tours around Fort Fisher. After her passing in 1985, the Friends of Fort Fisher sponsored a summer internship program in her honor.

Since 1986, these interns have assisted the site staff in numerous capacities such as visitor services, special events, historical research and programming. Last year, Fort Fisher was visited by over 800,000 people eager to learn about our role in the Civil War, North Carolina and United States History.

We are looking for individuals wishing to understand the day to day operations of a historic site, including gift shop and visitor services and daily tours. Our daily summertime tours include a guided, costumed interpreter and may include historic weapons demonstrations. In addition, interns will work with site staff to develop an internship project of their choosing. Projects are available in educational program development, event planning, or site-specific research. The Mary Holloway Intern position is available from mid-May to mid-August, 28 hours a week. Gain invaluable experience working in the public history field at North Carolina's most visited Historic Site. Help us educate, entertain, and enlighten our visitors. For more information on these unique opportunities, please contact John Moseley at 910-458-5538, ext. 201.

WE  VOLUNTEERS

Mr. Triebe will also be available to sign copies of his books about Fort Fisher POWs.

For the young and young at heart, the site's Junior Reserves program, "Attention Cannoneers!" will educate visitors about Civil War artillery from 11 am to 2 pm. Using math and science, visitors can hone their artillery skills by launching water balloons with the site's artillery simulator.

Visitors, residents, and motorists are advised that noise from cannon firings is extremely loud. Visitors are warned to stay out of barricaded firing ranges for their own safety. Smoking is prohibited in the firing areas. Visitors are cautioned to turn down any hearing aids, warn children, and control pets during all firing. Please note, due to circumstances beyond our control, all demonstrations and program components are subject to change.

All Fort Fisher programming is made possible by support from the Friends of Fort Fisher and its sustaining members: Troy and Lori Barbour, Mike McCarley, Tammy and Jack Moore, Brian and Deedra Nunnally, Jim and Catherine Taylor, Patrick O. McCullough, Forrest Goodman, Jr., Wilson Grab, and Ivarlee E. & Thomas E. Mulligan.

The tentative program schedule is as follows:

—Exhibit unveiling and introduction: 1:30 pm in visitors center

—David Meisky, Confederate currency presentation: 11:00 am in the auditorium

—Artillery demonstration and interpretation by costumed interpreters: 10:00 am, 12:00 pm 2:00 pm, and 4:00 pm

—Infantry demonstrations and interpretations by costumed interpreters: 10:30 am, 11:30 am, 1:30 pm, and 3:30 pm

—"Attention Cannoneers!" water balloon artillery simulator: 11:00 am to 2:00 pm

—"Design Your Own Medal" activity: 11:00 am to 2:00 pm

—Regular site tours: 9:30 am, 11:30 am, 1:30 pm and 3:30 pm

—"Above the Scenes" paid tour: 11:00 am and 1:00 pm
