The real giving tree

From staff and wire reports

For anonymous sex, look no further than your local pine tree. Police in Ramsey, Minn., say that 50-year-old Alan Petrusson tied himself to a tree with his genitals exposed and waited in a park for a sexual partner. Petrusson turned himself into authorities but insists that he was just sleeping. Yeah, right. He faces charges of indecent exposure, lewd conduct and trespassing, as the area in which he was exposed actually lies outside of the park on private land. “It’s the weirdest thing I’ve seen out there,” said Ramsey Police Chief James Way.

It’s probably difficult, finding a good place to expose yourself. Maybe next time, Petrusson should try a park that’s less family-friendly, or a more daring adventure into say, the actual wilderness.

NOTED. A man in Australia ran a half-marathon in a hot air balloon last week. Rob Ginnivan said he performed the feat to raise money for cancer. He ran 13 miles on a treadmill powered by a small generator in the hot air balloon. While he experienced leg cramps in the final miles of the half marathon, he completed it in 2 hours and 18 minutes.

QUOTED. “Who robs something with underwear on their head?”

— Jason Wilson, a coffee shop owner in southwest Idaho, after his shop, Big Star Coffee, was held up and robbed by a man wearing briefs over his head.

The robber and his accomplice made off with $500 from the shop’s safe.
