Church approves digital confession

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

Need to avoid eternal damnation? There's an app for that. The Catholic Church has approved an iPhone app that guides users through confession.

In Confession: A Roman Catholic App, users are taken through the sacrament and can keep track of their sins. The program also lets them examine their conscience based on factors such as age, sex and marital status.

Developers said the app is not meant to replace traditional confession, but to allow users to understand their actions and encourage them to visit their priests for absolution.

The app is available on iTunes for $1.99.

NOTED. Florida deputies are investigating a man's explanation behind why he sent pornographic images to a boy's cell phone.

Nine-year-old Ty'Ge Davis was shocked when he received photographs depicting oral sex being performed on a couch.

When his grandmother called the number, the man said he was trying to sell the couch in the photographs.

QUOTED. "When I got back, I had 68 photos of bags."

— Brian Wegener, coordinator of an Oregon environmental advocacy group, on his group's effort to ban single-use plastic bags.

Wegener is asking people to submit their own photos of bags littering Oregon streets and natural areas to be presented at a hearing on the hotly debated bill.
