Why am I marching?
Some of my forebears were farmers in South Carolina, and to be a farmer in the south back then you owned slaves, like farm equipment. I am not marching to pass judgment on individuals, but I am asking white Americans to stop justifying and start rectifying. Our economy was built on property rights, and when the forebears of many of our fellow citizens were themselves 'property' something remains econmically akilter until we address that. I don't know how, but I really want us all to talk about it. And right now I just want my feet on the ground along the path of this march for economic and social justice.
Ann Corley Silverman

Okra
Paper - Made for 2015 Okra Festival Burkeville, Alabama
Ann