For 42 years, the ACLU-NCLF has had the distinguished honor of recognizing local exemplary civil rights leaders at our annual Frank Porter Graham Awards Ceremony. This year, we are thrilled that our keynote speaker will be Dr. Timothy Tyson, author of the much-acclaimed Blood Done Sign My Name and other award-winning books. Dr. Tyson is a Senior Research Scholar at the Center for Documentary Studies and Visiting Professor of American Christianity and Southern Culture at Duke University. Blood Done Sign My Name, a finalist for the National Book Critics Circle Award and winner of the Christopher Award and the North Carolina Book Award, was the 2005 selection of the Carolina Summer Reading Program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, assigned to all new undergraduate students. Blood Done Sign My Name was made into a movie that was released nationwide in February 2010. Tyson's previous book Radio Free Dixie: Robert F. Williams and the Roots of Black Power (UNC Press, 1999) won the James Rawley Prize and was co-winner of the Frederick Jackson Turner Prize, both from the Organization of American Historians. He also co-edited, with David S. Cecelski, Democracy Betrayed: The Wilmington Race Riot of 1898 and Its Legacy (UNC Press, 1998), which won the 1999 Outstanding Book Award from the Gustavus Myers Center for the Study of Human Rights in North America. Tyson is a North Carolina native and a graduate of Duke (M.A. '91, Ph.D. '94).

The Frank Porter Graham Award will be presented this year to Mandy Carter, one of the country's leading African-American lesbian social justice activists. For more than four decades, Carter has been organizing for social justice, racial equality, and lesbian/gay/bisexual/transgender (LGBT) equality. She credits her commitment to activism to the influences of the Quaker-based American Friends Service Committee, the former Institute for the Study of Nonvio-

inspired Poor People's Campaign, organized by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in 1968, truly solidified her lifetime commitment to nonviolence.

In 1993, Carter was one of six co-founders of Southerners On New Ground (SONG), and she served as its Executive Director. Founded and based in Durham, SONG's purpose is to build progressive movements across the South by developing transformative models of organizing that connect race, class, culture, gender, and sexual identity. Specifically, SONG integrates work against homophobia into freedom struggles in the South.

In 2003, she also helped found the National Black Justice Coalition, a national civil rights organization of concerned

African-American LGBT individuals and allies dedicated to fostering equality by ending racism and homophobia.

Carter was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize as part of the "1,000 Women for the Nobel Peace Prize 2005" in order to recognize, make visible, and celebrate the often invisible peace work of thousands of women around the world. She has served on a long list of Boards of prominent social justice and political organizations, is a featured speaker at national civil rights events, and has received a number of honors from groups such as the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, Boston Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders, and the LGBT Center of Raleigh.

The Paul Green Award will be presented to Jay Ferguson for his extraordinary contributions to the death penalty defense community. Those of us who advocate for abolishing the death penalty know Ferguson to be a gifted attorney with a passion for justice and a generous heart. He has an incisive mind and keen talent as a litigator coupled with a genuinely humble spirit. Attorneys representing capital defendants regularly seek his advice, and he is always willing to listen

Ferguson has worked on a number of death penalty cases over the years, perhaps most notably winning relief for Guy LeGrande in 2008. LeGrande is a severely mentally ill man who insisted on representing himself at trial. An African-American man, LeGrande was sentenced to death by an all-white jury, having been tried by a prosecutor's office that awarded noose lapel pins to assistant district attorneys who secured death sentences. Ferguson took the case on appeal and argued successfully that LeGrande was not competent to be executed. This was the first time a North Carolina court found that a death-sentenced prisoner was not competent to be executed by the State.

Ferguson also played a prominent role in securing passage of the Racial Justice Act and in developing litigation strategy since this new law took effect. For his tireless efforts in these and so many more endeavors and for his unwavering passion for justice, we proudly present the Paul

Green Award to Jay Ferguson of the Durham law firm Thomas, Ferguson & Mullins.

Finally, the Board of Directors of the ACLU-NC will honor one of our most dedicated volunteers, Loretta Mershon, with the Norman Smith Award. Mershon was nominated unanimously by the ACLU of Wake County Board of Directors for her many years of service to the Wake County ACLU chapter. Mershon has been an active member of the ACLU since the 1970's.

She rejoined the Wake County ACLU Board in 2002 and served with distinction in several important leadership roles over the next eight years, including Board Secretary, Historian, Member and Chair of the W.W. Finlator Awards Nominating Committee, member of the Executive Committee, and Acting Board President. Her enthusiasm and lead-

Her extraordinary grace provided stability for the Wake ACLU chapter during trying
