

The Daily Tar Heel

KICKIN' IT OLD SCHOOL

UNC student groups enjoy reliving the 1990s

By Sarah Vassello
Senior Writer

Students longing for a time when Tamagotchis and "Rocket Power" were all the rage are not alone in their nostalgia.

In fact, many historians, cartoonists, UNC students and faculty are enthralled by the feeling.

Students are no strangers to this 90s fever: WXYC — UNC's student-run radio station — hosted its semi-annual '90s Dance Oct. 10 at Cat's Cradle, a popular event that junior Cozy Brents, WXYC promotional director and a former writer for The Daily Tar Heel, said consistently has attendance in the hundreds.

"It's sort of something that we all have a shared experience for," Brents said.

"Everyone knows about the 'Fresh Prince of Bel-Air' so we've all come from these crazy different backgrounds and ended up at the different places. But there are these cultural landmarks that we hold onto and that's probably why we like the '90s so much."

In the fall of 2013, the "tbtunc" project was also born. The group aims to promote '90s culture with events and a social media presence that already includes more than 800 likes on Facebook and about 400 Twitter followers. The project was created in the "New Media Technology and Its Impact on the Future of Advertising, Marketing and PR" course through UNC's School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

But one student group is thriving on the trend of '90s nostalgia. Once the group receives recognition from Student Congress, the Carolina Brings Back the '90s organization will kick off this year for students interested in submerging themselves in the memories of the decade once a month. The group has been meeting informally since 2012.

"The initial inspiration for the club was to create a way for people who grew up in the '90s to come together and enjoy the things we all grew up with," said senior Brendan Leonard, founder of Carolina Brings Back the '90s.

"We wanted a low-key club that would let us just hang out and watch things like 'Doug' and 'The Lion King' to reminisce on our childhood."

In the course of two years, the organization has risen to 300 members, with membership increasing primarily through word of mouth.

Historian and UNC associate professor Benjamin Waterhouse said the trend of '90s reminiscing is generational — and even unprecedented.

"It's not unusual in the past 40 or 50 years for people of a certain college age to glamorize what came before and not what came immediately before — which people tend to be very dismissive of, but what came before that," he said.

"The way you look at the 1990s is similar to the way I looked at the 1970s when I was in college."

Waterhouse cited the short

SEE NOSTALGIA, PAGE 6

DTH/JOHANNA FEREBEE

Sam Schaefer, Daily Tar Heel assistant opinion editor and WXYC disc jockey, works on Sept. 10 at '90s Night at Cat's Cradle.

Lenoir to 'Feed 5,000' for free

The event promotes minimizing food waste in the dining halls.

By David Doochin
Staff Writer

To promote sustainability, Carolina Dining Services plans to feed thousands — for free.

Today CDS will host an event called Feeding the 5,000, a global campaign started in the United Kingdom to raise awareness about food waste by cooking meals from food that would have otherwise been thrown away. The reason the food is thrown away is partly due to its appearance.

From 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Pit and at the Top of Lenoir today, members of the UNC community can get free food prepared with these surplus ingredients.

Brandon Thomas, a spokesman for CDS, said this is the first time the event will be held at a university, and he expects a huge turnout.

"It's students, faculty and staff — the entire University community," he said. "We expect that it will be a pretty full house."

Senior Mary Elizabeth Entwistle, a member of the Student Dining Board, said Feeding the 5,000 has helped increase UNC's presence in the local community.

"We had some of our own CDS managers go out to local farms and gather produce and help us be able to feed the people and stick with the mission of sustainability. From that, we've created a lot of partnerships with local farmers," she said. "We're gonna help work with them to make sure that they're being

SEE FOOD WASTE, PAGE 6

Business school severs ties with Habitat

Kenan-Flagler will not organize to build a Habitat for Humanity home this year.

By Kate Albers
Staff Writer

After 10 years, 10 homes and over $400,000 raised, Orange County Habitat for Humanity will not partner with the Kenan-Flagler Business School to build a house this academic year.

Tom Cawley, director of events at the business school, said many considerations went into this decision.

"It wasn't more about a breaking up or anything like that. It was just the relationship changing," he said.

The business school is trying to evaluate what kinds of community service it will organize in the future.

Cawley said community is a core value of the business school and that there is a community service committee working to decide the future of the community component and future philanthropic directions.

"We're looking at this right now as far as how do we get everyone behind an effort, and what should that effort look like, and kind of the philosophy of it and everything like that," he said.

Cawley said there was not one main reason why the partnership with Habitat for Humanity was ended, nor did anyone do anything wrong. He said the partnership has progressed, and different considerations, such as location of builds, resources and diverse philanthropic interests, led them to this decision.

"It's a great organization, and what

SEE HABITAT, PAGE 6

Former US treasurer critiques feminism

Bay Buchanan discussed gender issues such as pay equity.

By Sharon Nunn
Assistant State & National Editor

Former U.S. Treasurer Bay Buchanan, who served in President Ronald Reagan's administration, spoke to students Tuesday about what she called the failures of modern feminism and the need for strong leadership in America today.

Buchanan, who is now a conservative political commentator, listed reasons she believes the modern feminist movement has failed, talked about leadership and then opened the floor for questions.

But Buchanan first gave the feminist movement credit, saying it broke barriers and opened up doors for women.

She then said the movement failed because it advocated a narrow path for women that focused only on careers as a means of fulfillment.

She also emphasized the failure to address men and women's different priorities in equal pay arguments and what she called the idea of "victimhood."

Buchanan was a single mother for 20 years, but she said she never felt like a victim — the way she believes single mothers are often portrayed in feminist arguments.

Buchanan said the second wave of feminism started with a book called "The Feminine Mystique" by Betty Friedan.

Buchanan said one of the main tenets of Friedan's book was the idea that women cannot be fulfilled unless they have a career.

But Buchanan said the number of women leaving their careers and coming home to care for their children is increasing dramatically.

"It's clear — not all women

SEE SPEAKER, PAGE 6

DTH/IVANA CHAN

Former U.S. Treasurer Bay Buchanan spoke about her misgivings with modern feminism during an event hosted by the UNC College Republicans Tuesday.

Inside

POLITICAL PARTIES VIE FOR YOUTH VOTE

Both parties are changing their tactics to garner the youth vote in the upcoming election. Page 3

WHAT THE SCANDAL MEANS TO FRESHMEN

The Daily Tar Heel polled freshmen to find out how they feel about the athletic scandal and whether they think it hurts UNC's reputation. See the infographic with their responses. Page 5

5TH-GRADE PUMPKIN AUCTION

Fifth-graders in the art club at Morris Grove Elementary School will auction off pumpkins this month to raise money for the nonprofit United Way of the Triangle. Page 3

Today's weather

A 100% chance of breaking news.
H 66, L 45

Thursday's weather

No Ugg boots yet, ladies.
H 68, L 44

“You don't have it yet, kid.”

BEN BRADLEE TO BOB WOODWARD

The Daily Tar Heel

www.dailytarheel.com

Established 1893
121 years of editorial freedomJENNY SURANE
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
EDITOR@DAILYTARHEEL.COMKATIE REILLY
MANAGING EDITOR
MANAGING.EDITOR@DAILYTARHEEL.COMJORDAN NASH
FRONT PAGE NEWS EDITOR
ENTERPRISE@DAILYTARHEEL.COMTARA JEFFRIES
FRONT PAGE NEWS EDITOR
ENTERPRISE@DAILYTARHEEL.COMMCKENZIE COEY
PRODUCTION DIRECTOR
DTH@DAILYTARHEEL.COMBRADLEY SAACKS
UNIVERSITY EDITOR
UNIVERSITY@DAILYTARHEEL.COMHOLLY WEST
CITY EDITOR
CITY@DAILYTARHEEL.COMSARAH BROWN
STATE & NATIONAL EDITOR
STATE@DAILYTARHEEL.COMGRACE RAYNOR
SPORTS EDITOR
SPORTS@DAILYTARHEEL.COMGABRIELLA CIRELLI
ARTS & CULTURE EDITOR
ARTS@DAILYTARHEEL.COMTYLER VAHAN
DESIGN & GRAPHICS EDITOR
DESIGN@DAILYTARHEEL.COMCHRIS GRIFFIN
VISUAL EDITOR
PHOTO@DAILYTARHEEL.COMMARISA DINOVIS,
KATHLEEN HARRINGTON
COPY CO-EDITORS
COPY@DAILYTARHEEL.COMPAIGE LADISIC
ONLINE EDITOR
ONLINE@DAILYTARHEEL.COMAMANDA ALBRIGHT
INVESTIGATIONS LEADER
SPECIAL_PROJECTS@DAILYTARHEEL.COMMARY BURKE
INVESTIGATIONS ART DIRECTOR
SPECIAL_PROJECTS@DAILYTARHEEL.COM

TIPS

Contact Managing Editor
Katie Reilly at managing.editor@dailytarheel.com with tips, suggestions or corrections.Mail and Office: 151 E. Rosemary St.
Chapel Hill, NC 27514
Jenny Surane, Editor-in-Chief, 962-4086
Advertising & Business, 962-1163
News, Features, Sports, 962-0245One copy per person; additional copies may be purchased at The Daily Tar Heel for $0.25 each.
Please report suspicious activity at our distribution racks by emailing dth@dailytarheel.com© 2014 DTH Media Corp.
All rights reserved

COMMUNITY CALENDAR

TODAY

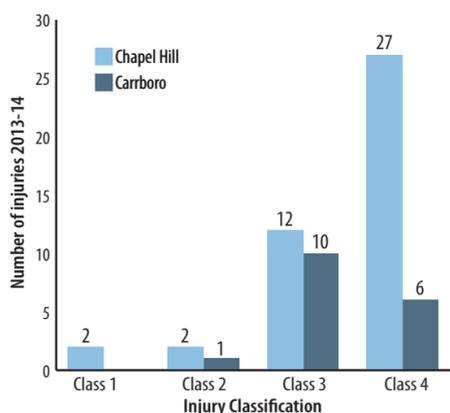

Justice Corrupted: How the Drug War Wastes Money and Ruins Lives: UNC economics professor emeritus Arthur Benavie will discuss the high economic costs of the American War on Drugs campaign. The event costs $18 in advance, $8 in advance for UNC General Alumni Association members and $20 at the door.
Time: 4:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.
Location: Flyleaf BooksVision Series: "Into the Woods" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream": This installment allows the audience to meet the director and learn about the production process.
Time: 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.
Location: Paul Green TheatreRace, Innocence and the End of the Death Penalty Series: This speaker series is hostedin conjunction with the Race, Innocence and the End of the Death Penalty course. This installment features LaMonte Armstrong, who was exonerated on murder charges in 2013, and his attorney, Theresa Newman. The event is free and open to the public.
Time: 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.
Location: Hamilton HallGabriel Kahane's "The Ambassador": As he begins a two-year residency at UNC, composer Gabriel Kahane will premiere his song cycle "The Ambassador," which captures Kahane's fascination with the city of Los Angeles.
Time: 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Location: Memorial HallTHURSDAY Public Art and Advocacy: FRANK Gallery will host a discussionon the role of public art and advocacy in the community. The event will feature musical performances
Time: 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.
Location: FRANK GalleryThe Matchsellers Live (concert): Midwestern natives Julie Bates and Andrew Morris, known onstage as The Matchsellers, will present their alternative bluegrass sound, which has been influenced by their time living in Germany.
Time: 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.
Location: 901 W. Main St., Carrboro*To make a calendar submission, email calendar@dailytarheel.com. Please include the date of the event in the subject line, and attach a photo if you wish. Events will be published in the newspaper on either the day or the day before they take place.*

CORRECTIONS

Due to a reporting error, the Oct. 14 version of this graphic, which ran with the front page story "Chapel Hill works on cyclist street safety," included incorrect data about crashes involving bicyclists and pedestrians. Between 2013 and 2014, 43 bicyclists and pedestrians were injured in crashes in Chapel Hill. Of those, two were Class 1 injuries, two were Class 2 injuries, 12 were Class 3 injuries and 27 were Class 4 injuries. Police have classified the Oct. 3 fatality as a Class 1 injury. The Daily Tar Heel apologizes for the error.

Bike and pedestrian crashes in Chapel Hill and Carrboro

The majority of incidents since 2013 has been Class 4 injuries, indicating possible injury. If the Oct. 3 accident is counted as a Class 1 injury after the Chapel Hill Police Department concludes its investigation, it will be the third cyclist fatality in the 2013-14 period.

SOURCE: TOWN OF CARRBORO, TOWN OF CHAPEL HILL

- The Daily Tar Heel reports any inaccurate information published as soon as the error is discovered.
- Editorial corrections will be printed on this page. Errors committed on the Opinion Page have corrections printed on that page. Corrections also are noted in the online versions of our stories.
- Contact Managing Editor Katie Reilly at managing.editor@dailytarheel.com with issues about this policy.

Like us at facebook.com/dailytarheel

Follow us on Twitter @dailytarheel

DAILY DOSE

Bowl of rat-atouille

From staff and wire reports

A diner at a Golden Corral restaurant in Cape Coral, Fla., says he found a nasty secret ingredient in his chili: a furry, snaggle-toothed object that appeared to be the head of a rat, according to reports from WFTX TV. Naturally, the man, who frequented the restaurant location before the incident, got free food out of the ordeal, but it wasn't enough to calm his rampant indigestion after pulling a piece of rodent out of his savory meal. Hopefully he wasn't attempting a vegetarian diet.

NOTED. A Florida man was arrested after he exposed himself to women at a mall, police say. The man claimed he was simply "extreme shopping," which we thought involved Amazon and a little too much wine, not flashing.

QUOTED. "It wasn't Santa Claus, for sure."
— A California man who found that Christmas came early when he caught his ex-girlfriend stuck in his chimney. The woman had to be "lubricated with dish soap" to be removed.

POLICE LOG

- Someone stole items from a purse at 206 W. Franklin St. between 1:30 a.m. and 2:05 a.m. Saturday, according to Chapel Hill police reports.

The person stole a GoPro camera, valued at $350, a driver's license, valued at $25, and $20 in cash, reports state.

- Someone broke into and entered a residence at the 100 block of North Street at 2:33 a.m. Saturday, according to Chapel Hill police reports.

The person damaged a door, valued at $200, a screen door, valued at $50, and stole computer software, valued at $385, reports state.

- Someone committed larceny at 125 S. Estes Drive between 10:15 a.m. and 10:45 a.m. Saturday, according to Chapel Hill police reports.

The person stole a Samsung Galaxy cellphone, valued at $500, a driver's license, credit card, phone case and $20 in cash, reports state.

- Someone committed larceny from Light Years, 121 E. Franklin St., at 5:24 p.m. Saturday, according to Chapel Hill police reports.

The person stole four sets of earrings with a value totaling $80, reports state.

- Someone had a loud party with music on the 300 block of Estes Drive at 12:10 a.m. Saturday, according to Carrboro police reports.

The person agreed to turn down the music, reports state.

- Someone broke into and entered a vehicle on the 300 block of N.C. 54 between 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday, according to Carrboro police reports.

The person ransacked the interior of the vehicle but took nothing, reports state.

TONIGHT!

THE AMBASSADOR
GABRIEL KAHANE

INDIE ROCK ROYALTY

Gabriel Kahane with members of
Bon Iver and Sufjan Stevens

LIVE AT UNC'S MEMORIAL HALL

OCTOBER 22 at 7:30 PM

Die Hard and Blade Runner, race riots and natural disasters, urban blight and austere modernist architecture are all fodder for Gabriel Kahane's The Ambassador, an investigation of the underbelly of Los Angeles.

Directed by Tony Award-winner John Tiffany (Black Watch, Once)
Set Design by Tony Award-winner Christine Jones (Spring Awakening)

CAROLINA PERFORMING ARTS 10 SEASONS

STUDENT TICKETS
just $10

#TheAmbassadorLA carolinaperformingarts.org BOX OFFICE 919.843.3333

7th Annual
CAROLINA CLIMATE CHANGE SEMINAR

Dr. Inez Fung is a climate scientist at the University of California, Berkeley. She studies interactions between climate change and the biogeochemical cycles and focuses on processes that modify the composition of the atmosphere, and hence the climate. Her research involves the co-evolution of atmospheric CO₂ and climate, and what can humans do about it. One of the most important aspects of this research is collecting information from atmosphere ocean and land pertinent to the carbon cycle. Prof. Fung is a distinguished member of the National Academy of Sciences and a contributor to the 2007 Nobel Peace Prize awarded to the Intergovernmental Panel for Climate Change. Her biography "Forecast Earth" is part of the National Academy of Sciences series "Women's Adventures in Science" aimed at middle school girls.

Dr. Inez Fung

photo: Elena Zhukova © UC Regents.

Thursday

OCTOBER 23, 2014, 7:30 P.M.

FedEx GLOBAL EDUCATION CENTER
NELSON MANDELA AUDITORIUMPUBLIC SEMINAR: *Carbon Dioxide from Space:
Towards Climate Treaty Verification*

Followed by a catered reception

Friday

OCTOBER 24, 2014, 12:30 P.M.

TATE-TURNER-KURALT AUDITORIUM

TECHNICAL TALK: Water, Plant and Climate: Assessing the Climatic Impacts of Afforestation

FREE TO THE PUBLIC

Free parking available at McCauley lot (10/23)
global.unc.edu//find-us/

Department of Geological Sciences

Sponsored by the offices of the UNC Chancellor and the Provost, the College of Arts and Sciences, and the Institute for the Environment

IT'S THE GREAT PUMPKIN, MORRIS GROVE

DTH/PHOEBE JOLLAY-CASTELBLANCO

Fifth grade art club students at Morris Grove Elementary paint pumpkins after school for a pumpkin auction to raise money for United Way.

5th-graders auction pumpkins for the United Way

By Hannah Jagers
Staff Writer

Morris Grove Elementary School fifth graders have been rolling up their sleeves and rolling out their paintbrushes in anticipation of this year's pumpkin auction.

The school will host its third pumpkin auction starting today at 2:30 p.m. in the front lobby. The auctions will run until Oct. 28. All 25 pumpkins were hand painted by fifth grade students in the Morris Grove art club.

Rebecca Springer, the visual arts teacher at the school who also runs the art club, said the kids have been dedicated to their pumpkin artwork.

"They are so excited about it," she said. "They would come in every day and work on it during lunch and recess if they could."

The art club members met on Tuesdays to work on their pumpkins. This year, designs include a glow-in-the-dark pumpkin, a gumball pumpkin and a pumpkin hedgehog.

"We've done a few different things this year to make it a little more fun," Springer said.

In 2013, the auction raised almost $1,000, including a bid of $95 for a UNC-themed pumpkin. Springer said she hopes they can surpass $1,000 at this year's auction with the tremendous amount of dedication shown by the students.

The money raised will go toward the nonprofit United Way of the Greater Triangle, which serves Orange, Johnston, Durham and Wake counties.

Chris Pfitzer, vice president of marketing and communications for the United Way of the Greater Triangle, said the money raised in the auction would likely be used to fund several of United Way's initiatives.

"We partner with all the school districts within our region and a lot of them do events like this," Pfitzer said. "One of our key areas is education."

Springer said she was excited to partner with the nonprofit, especially since this year's auction coincides with United Way's annual campaign.

"I thought that it would be a fun way for the students of the art club to have a creative project to do that also benefitted the community," Springer said. "I talked about the United Way with the kids so that they would understand how many different programs they support."

Gretchen Westman, the school's librarian and media specialist, bought three pumpkins at 2013's auction, one of which was Harry Potter themed.

"It's an opportunity to do a kind of community service — not all kids have that in their day-to-day life," Westman said. "And they have a lot of fun, and they get a lot of positive feedback on their pumpkins and their artwork."

Westman also said parents get just as excited about the pumpkins as students do.

"I think that they really enjoy it," Westman said. "It brings parents into the building that may not always have an opportunity to come because they want to see."

Springer said she is grateful for the excitement and dedication shown by her students.

"It's a special group of kids," Springer said. "They're very passionate about it and take great pride in their work."

city@dailytarheel.com

More schools can nominate to Morehead

More than 48 nominating schools were added to the scholarship's list.

By Bri Cotton
Staff Writer

Though originally limited to in-state students, the Morehead-Cain Scholarship is growing increasingly accessible to students all over the U.S. — but the process is still more limiting to those outside N.C.

This year 48 schools, including one international school, were added to the list.

"Our hope is to provide access to the Morehead-Cain selection process to as many students as possible," said Megan Mazzocchi, associate director of the Morehead-Cain Foundation. "So every year we add interested schools to the list of out-of-state and international schools that can nominate."

While all in-state high schools are able to nominate students, and North Carolina residents who are not nominated can apply directly, the process is more challenging for out-of-state students.

Out-of-state students must be nominated by their high schools or apply early action for a chance to be referred by the UNC Office of Admissions.

Mazzocchi said she believes the nomination process is an integral part of candidate selection. "It really gives us some extra insight on the student," she said.

She said schools are good partners to help the program identify students with the holistic set of characteristics needed for the program.

"They try to distill the underlying characteristics of a person and not just look at their resume," said Andrew Powell, student body president and Morehead-Cain scholar from Nashville, Tenn.

While the application process is strenuous, joining the nominating list is not.

"Pretty much any school that applies to be on the list is added, because we know they are committed to being a part of our program," Mazzocchi said.

Powell said more nationwide recognition would encourage out-of-state students to apply.

Freshman Morehead-Cain scholar Niman Mann, also from Nashville, agreed.

"I'd never heard of the program but I researched it a bit after I was nominated," she said. "I didn't even realize the prestige of the program until I came to finals week."

Both Mann and Powell said lack of national recognition for the scholarship hasn't negatively impacted diversity.

"I think they do a remarkable job of recruiting people from all different places geographically, all different walks of life," Powell said.

Mazzocchi said she is pleased with the program diversity but is always looking for diverse applicants.

Powell said the scholarship is one of the best. "I really think that it's the best educational opportunity you can get. I've absolutely had an incredible experience," he said. "I would in full confidence tell a prospective student to take the Morehead-Cain over any Ivy League school or Oxford... or anywhere."

university@dailytarheel.com

Students tell their need-based aid story

According to Andrew Powell, need-based aid is here to stay.

By Noelle Wells
Staff Writer

Freshman Hiren Gihwala could go to UNC without financial aid, but the aid he received gave him the stability he needed to take advantage of other opportunities at the University.

"I can come to Carolina and still participate in things and still get a great education," Gihwala said.

Gihwala said one of the benefits of having a strong financial aid program at UNC was the diversity it created among students.

Gihwala was one of dozens of students at "Student Stories: A 100% Need-Based Event," a program sponsored by the executive branch of student government, Multicultural Affairs and Diversity Outreach and the Campus Y. A panel of students talked about the Board of Governors' new cap-and-freeze plan, which limits the amount of tuition that can go towards need-based aid to 15 percent.

Under the new proposal, if the University devotes more than this percentage, then the total dollar amount would be frozen until it was lower than 15 percent of the price of tuition.

When the proposal passed over the summer, members of the BOG said they wanted to minimize the hardship on middle-class families created by rising tuition.

Members of the board felt the cap-and-freeze rule would decrease the rate of tuition increases by placing a cap on the percentage of tuition that can go to need-based aid.

DTH/CAMERON ROBERT

Students gather in the Student Union to discuss need-based aid at UNC.

"There was an idea that we were content with raising the overall price of tuition, if we would keep increasing aid incrementally, and they thought that's a problem," said Student Body President Andrew Powell, who sat on the panel.

Although the Board of Governors might see it that way, Powell said it might not be the case.

"Aid doesn't drive tuition increases. Tuition increases drive requisite aid increases," he said.

Powell said the policy change should not impact students, regardless of whether they receive need-based aid.

"It's not any sort of doom and gloom situation necessarily, because our commitment to meeting 100 percent of student need is such a high priority for the University, that we will sacrifice a lot of other things before we ball up on that commitment," Powell said.

As one of the last remaining public universities that is dedicated to meeting 100 percent of a student's financial need, Powell said the issue was one of the top priorities of student government and the University administration.

The University is committed to continuing its need-based aid program, even if it involves finding different sources of money for the program.

"Since it's such a high priority, I'm very confident that we'll find a way to make it work," Powell said.

The meeting also included stories from students who explained how need-based tuition helped them excel at UNC, along with discussions about broader issues in financial aid.

"Financial aid and need-based financial aid at UNC is essentially a public good," said Student Body Vice President Kyle Villemain, who also sat on the panel.

"It helps every single student here, not just the students who are receiving it."

university@dailytarheel.com

Campaigns compete for the youth vote

Parties battle for young voters on the eve of the midterm election.

By Benji Schwartz
Staff Writer

The Republican and Democratic National Committees have launched opposing initiatives for the upcoming midterm elections — the target this time: youth voters.

Ferrel Guillory, a UNC journalism professor and director of the Program on Public Life, said the old cliché of every vote counting might ring true for the midterm elections.

"The control of the United States Senate remains in the balance in this election, and in North Carolina the contest between Sen. Hagan and speaker Tillis appears to come down to just a figurative handful of votes," Guillory said.

Youth voters have a known Democratic tilt in their political views. In a poll by Fusion, an online news network, 47 percent of people aged 18 to 34 said they would vote Democrat in 2014, compared to 32 percent who would vote Republican.

Public Policy Polling, a left-leaning private firm based in Raleigh, found that 61 percent of young voters in North Carolina favored incumbent Sen. Kay Hagan compared to 27 percent who favored N.C. House Speaker Thom Tillis.

Raffi Williams, deputy press secretary for the RNC, said the Democratic lead among youth voters can be attributed to the fact that the RNC has only recently begun an outreach program to youths.

"If you look at the Democratic agenda, it hasn't helped millennials at all," Williams said, noting high youth unemployment rates. "So it is voting for your future, for your interests and the interests of the country to get out there to vote."

Last week the RNC held a conference call between Tillis and College

Republicans, volunteer days, phone banking and various rallies throughout the state.

The DNC has been using its existing youth vote structures to turn out young voters for the election. In early October, College Democrats from states with non-competitive races were bused to states with competitive races, including North Carolina.

Additionally, the DNC allows individual state campaigns to use its election infrastructure, and the College Democrats released a video Thursday.

Rob Flaherty, youth media director for the DNC, said youth voters have tended to vote Democratic because the Democratic Party represented them best on issues like gay marriage, equal pay, healthcare and student loans, among others, and that Republicans stand against the interests of young voters.

"Republicans, no matter what they are saying, stand for the same things," Flaherty said. "They said they had to do this rebrand and that if they were to reach out to young people they had to change how they reach out, but not what they stand for."

Guillory said the new, targeted form of campaigning came from lessons from President Barack Obama's 2008 campaign. Parties still use television ad topics, but have started using targeted efforts to motivate the base to vote in order to win elections.

Flaherty said the DNC is trying to ensure that young people, who typically have low turnout in midterm elections, will come out to vote in November in record numbers.

"If you look at where our generation is going, young people are an increasing share of the population," Flaherty said. "By 2016, data is showing that young people, people called millennials, are going to be about a third of the electorate, so this is an important opportunity for young people to have their voices heard."

state@dailytarheel.com

CDS

The Pit + Top of Lenoir

Free lunch today!

11am - 2pm

FEEDING THE 5,000
#F5KUNC

CAROLINA DINING SERVICES

Join CDS for a FREE LUNCH at Top of Lenoir and the Pit from 11am - 2pm TODAY with a featured F5KUNC menu!

FIND THE MENU AND LEARN MORE AT DINING.UNC.EDU

Rams Head will be serving the regular lunch menu.

TRISTRAM STUART

Feeding the 5,000 Founder

JONATHAN BLOOM

Author, "American Wasteland"

SOPHIE WASKOW RIFKIN

Sea to Table Director

GUEST SPEAKER EVENT

Carolina Union Auditorium
TONIGHT | 6.15pm - 7.30pm

First 150 people will receive a free F5K t-shirt!

dining.unc.edu

feedbackglobal.org

A SPECIAL THANKS TO OUR PARTNERS:

Farmer Foodshare • Slow Food • Inter-Faith Council for Social Service • Sustainability Office
Chapel Hill/Carrboro Meals on Wheels • Ep Eta Environmental Honors Fraternity • SWEAT
Food Bank of Central and Eastern North Carolina • Eco Reps • Sonder Market • HOPE Gardens
Office of Waste Reduction and Recycling • FLO Food • CHEAP • Environmental Affairs Committee

A different perspective on the athletic scandal

With the impending release of Kenneth Wainstein's report today, The Daily Tar Heel polled 102 freshmen on the athletic scandal. Eight responses were discarded due to incomplete answers or misunderstood questions.

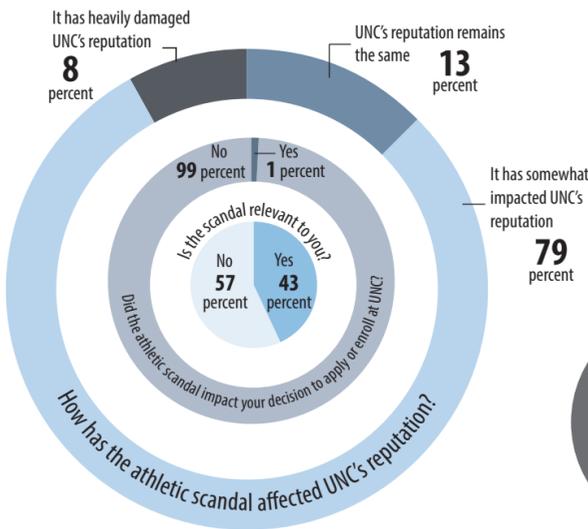

Name game: Scandal version

Freshmen were asked to identify five of the scandal's major players: Julius Nyang'oro, Kenneth Wainstein, Dick Baddour, Mary Willingham and Marvin Austin.

	Former AFAM chairman JULIUS NYANG'ORO	VERY WELL: 2 NAME RECOGNITION: 10 NO RECOGNITION: 90
	Former federal prosecutor KENNETH WAINSTEIN	VERY WELL: 1 NAME RECOGNITION: 14 NO RECOGNITION: 87
	Former director of athletics DICK BADDOUR	VERY WELL: 0 NAME RECOGNITION: 10 NO RECOGNITION: 92
	Former athletic tutor and whistleblower MARY WILLINGHAM	VERY WELL: 7 NAME RECOGNITION: 9 NO RECOGNITION: 86
	Former UNC football player MARVIN AUSTIN	VERY WELL: 2 NAME RECOGNITION: 17 NO RECOGNITION: 83

What the athletic scandal means to freshmen

In The Daily Tar Heel survey, the scandal's relevance, impact and legacy were rated by the class of 2018. While nearly half of those polled thought the scandal was still relevant to them, the vast majority did not let the scandal affect their decision to apply or enroll at UNC.

Rates per hour

If they all worked 40 hours per week for the 34 weeks between Feb. 23 and Oct. 17, UNC would owe Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, LLP:

$3.74 million

SOURCE: UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA GENERAL COUNSEL

DTH/KAITLYN KELLY, TYLER VAHAN, RYAN HERRERA, AILEEN MA

Knowledge on investigations into UNC's academic misconduct

The class of 2018 was polled on its knowledge of the investigations at UNC. While many knew of the NCAA's investigation, few of those polled knew of the reports done by former Gov. Jim Martin or the current investigation completed by former federal prosecutor Kenneth Wainstein.

SURVEY COMPILED BY: KELLY JASIURA, LEAH KOMADA, COLLEEN MOIR, LIZ BELL

Finance committee debates stipend fairness

The committee is considering changes to stipend policies.

By Olivia Bane
Staff Writer

Stipends were the main topic of discussion at Tuesday night's Student Congress finance committee meeting.

Currently, some members of the executive and judicial branches of student government, such as the attorney general and the student body president, do receive stipends, but Student Congress members do not.

Finance committee chairman Josh Aristy said he does not think current stipends fulfill their original purpose.

"Stipends were originally created for people who had to stay over the summer for jobs like student body president, but they have evolved to last throughout the whole school year," he said.

Speaker Ivy Hardy said she does not think any groups should get stipends.

"I think student government should be a labor of love," Hardy said. "I also don't think one group should get a stipend if another doesn't."

One option is to start allocating stipends to Congress, as well. But Aristy voiced his concern about this solution.

"It seems problematic for Student Congress to fund itself," Aristy said.

Sophomore representative Cole Simons pointed out that Congress could have someone in another branch of government handle stipend allocations to Congress.

"We have checks and balances. We could use someone else in another branch to look at Congress getting stipend money," Simons said.

Aristy said taking away all stipends for these groups is not an ideal solution because some students need stipends to be able to afford to carry out their job's responsibilities, but funds should be allocated more selectively.

"My suggestion would be to give stipends for people who qualify for work-study because that seems to be a pretty fair way to do what we're trying to exemplify here," Simons said.

Hardy said while the leaders of the executive and judicial branches work hard, Congress members do as well.

"If we're going to give stipends to the two other branches, I think we should give them to Student Congress as well," Hardy said.

To eliminate excessive stipend allocations, Hardy suggested a system in which student government members are reimbursed instead of given the freedom to create a budget based on their estimated needs.

"I wouldn't be opposed to retroactive funding where people submit requests after the fact," Hardy said.

Aristy said these proposed changes would not apply to the people currently receiving stipends, but only to future members of student government.

At the next Congress meeting set for Nov. 4, some current members of student government will be asked to speak for two minutes each in front of the full Congress to give insight on these proposed budget changes.

Aristy encouraged members of the Finance

Committee to draft an amendment that would change how stipends are allocated to the three branches of student government.

university@dailytarheel.com

SOUTHERN RAIL
LUNCH • BRUNCH • DINNER
CARRBORO

COFFEE MUSIC COCKTAILS
TIGER ROOM • THE STATION • BAR CAR

Great Yogurt,
Great Value,
YOPO

Downtown Chapel Hill • 942-PUMP
106 W. Franklin St. (Next to He's Not Here)
Mon-Thurs 11:30am-11:30pm
Fri-Sat 11:30am-Midnight, Sun Noon-11:30
www.yogurtpump.com

For safe destruction, recycling of confidential documents.

Shred-A-Thon 2014

Free to Orange County residents and businesses, and local government employees only.

Thursday, October 23, University Mall (corner of Willow and Estes Dr.) Chapel Hill - Park and walk-up service only
Saturday, October 25, Hampton Pointe, behind the Home Depot, Hillsborough
BOTH EVENTS ARE 10AM-2PM

Limited to 5 boxes or 5 bags!
Only one trip per household or organization
Paper documents only.
Please do not bring Plastic Binders, Metal or Electronic Media.

Sponsored by
Orange County Solid Waste Management
Local Government Federal Credit Union
Local Law Enforcement

For information, call 919-968-2788
or visit <http://orangecountync.gov/recycling/news.asp>

YOU DON'T HAVE TO LIVE HERE TO EAT HERE

at Granville Towers

Sign up for the non-resident 100 meal plan in December 2013 and receive a $20 discount.

granville
TOWERS
The Place To Be at UNC

125 W. FRANKLIN ST., DOWNTOWN CHAPEL HILL
(800)332-3113 • WWW.GRANVILLETOWERS.COM

FOOD WASTE

FROM PAGE 1
able to use all of their produce if they have surplus.”
Thomas said an advantage of the event is that Carolina Dining Services isn't spending much money to buy food.
“A lot of it is food that's gonna be donated, so it's not gonna be a great cost to Carolina Dining to do this,” he said.
Freshman Amukelani Muyanga said UNC dining halls promote some of the same wasteful tendencies that Feeding the 5,000 wants to avoid.
“The dining halls really feed into the culture of excess here. You swipe in once and then it's literally all you can eat. You can have a pizza and a burger and some pasta and a cookie and a milkshake and a waffle in one sitting if you wanted to,” she said. “It just makes you feel like food is always there and always in abundance, which might feed into how people approach food.”

Though she argued the dining halls don't always inspire sustainability, Muyanga said Feeding the 5,000 has the potential to encourage people to think about wastefulness.
“I think it's a worthwhile endeavor because even though you won't change everybody's thinking, everybody's approach, it's definitely going to spark some thoughts in a lot

FEEDING THE 5,000

Time: 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. today
Location: Top of Nenoir dining hall and the Pit
Info: bit.ly/ZNhrny
of people's minds,” she said.
Entwistle said she wants the message of the event to resonate at UNC long after it's over.
“We're trying to encourage people that maybe when they're filling their plate at the Top of Nenoir to take what they can eat,” she said. “We're making sure people are mindful of where the food comes from and trying to reduce waste.”
university@dailytarheel.com

HABITAT

FROM PAGE 1
they do is amazing. We formed some great relationships with the people who've had the houses over the years,” Cawley said.
“It's one of the privileges we had as a group was meeting these families every year and taking faculty, staff and students out to these dedications. It was amazing and very emotional — very powerful.”
The business school won't forget the time and effort they spent working with Habitat, Cawley said. More than 2,800 faculty, staff and student volunteers worked over 333,000 hours at job sites.

Julia Buchanan, co-chairwoman of UNC Habitat for Humanity, said in an email that she is not as familiar with the relationship between the business school and the Orange County affiliate. She said UNC Habitat and the business school have separate partnerships with the Orange County affiliate.
Alice Jacoby, partnership and volunteer manager for Habitat of Humanity for Orange County, said the nonprofit has had nothing but a positive relationship working with the business school, and that students, including business school majors, are still involved with Habitat.

“We're very grateful to Kenan-Flagler. They've sponsored 10 houses with us, and up to 10 families were able to buy a house they wouldn't be able to otherwise,” she said.
“It's always encouraging to see the business school — and so many students at UNC in general — just give so much of their time. It's been a great relationship and you know, like I said, we look forward to working with them again in future years.”
university@dailytarheel.com

SPEAKER

FROM PAGE 1
believe the career is the best path,” she said.
Buchanan also said women typically chose lower-paying but often more fulfilling jobs than men do, such as staying home and taking care of children — implying that the national difference in pay has a reason.
“If you have two employees, guy and girl, and they're moving straight up the ladder, and she decides to go home and be with her children for four or five years, you're not going to expect that when she goes back that she'll have the same pay level,” Buchanan said.
She said if one compares equal education, number of years of experience and similar fields, the pay equity number is at 96 percent.
Although the event was sponsored by the College Republicans, liberal-minded students attended Buchanan's talk, too — and they asked plenty of questions when she opened the floor.

“Her arguments were well-formed, but she didn't address our questions directly,” said Matthew Krause, a UNC freshman who attended the talk.
But Sundus Alfe, another UNC freshman, said she is a strong liberal-leaning Democrat and that she expected to hate Buchanan's talk and disagree with her viewpoints.
“Though I disagree with her portrayal of feminism, I did like some of her points and happened to agree with them,” she said. “I think it's important to get both sides of the picture.”
That was one of Buchanan's goals — “that the left, liberal students recognize there are other points of view, and they should hear them,” she said.

UNC College Republicans chairwoman Kathryn Walker said the questions at the end were thought-provoking.
“The questions were obviously from a different viewpoint,” Walker said.
“That, again, goes into Ms. Buchanan's ideas about debate.”
No matter their political stances, most of the students in the Carroll Hall auditorium Tuesday evening nodded their heads in agreement when Buchanan said the U.S. does not have true leadership in Washington.
“You cannot be a leader if you don't let people know what you believe,” she said. “Start the debate.”
state@dailytarheel.com

NOSTALGIA

FROM PAGE 1
distance of time and the strong sense of nostalgia as two potential reasons for this generational trend.
“The '90s are far enough in the past that you don't have any real crystal clear living memories of it. But it's not so far in the past that it feels terribly old,” he said. “In fact, given the age of most college kids today, in a way you're not embracing your parent's youth — which you would be doing if you were thinking about the '80s — but you're also not embracing your own lifetime. So you're embracing a happy medium.”
But Guy Gilchrist, a self-proclaimed Tar Heel fan and the current cartoonist for “Nancy,” a comic series that's been running since 1933, cites nostalgia as a force that brings readers back to the comic day after day.
“It may not even be about

“(Nostalgia) is a wonderful feeling that's inside of you that's always with you, no matter what.”
Guy Gilchrist
Cartoonist for “Nancy” comic strip.
a time — it might be more about a feeling with some people. Because, with some people, I think that memories that we have, especially good memories of our childhood and things — that meant something to us. And of course your nostalgia is totally different than mine,” he said.
Gilchrist said he attempts to channel familiar feelings of nostalgia in his “Nancy” strips.
“It's that warm security blanket that you had when you were a kid. It's playing toss with your dad or your big brother or you and your sisters falling all over each other in the waves at the ocean. It's that first love that you had and what was on the radio,” he said.
arts@dailytarheel.com
“If we remember that it's all of that stuff, then as a cartoonist, it's my job to help bring those memories back to you and to be a part of your new memories.”
For now, senior Natalia Perez, president of Carolina Brings Back the '90s, describes nostalgia as simple: an easier time in life.
“It's that simpler time. Things weren't as complicated — when we weren't applying to grad school, applying to college, writing papers, taking midterms,” she said.
“We were, you know, trying to make sure we colored inside of the lines and make sure that we watched Pokemon in time.”

DTH Classifieds

DTH office is open Mon-Fri 8:30am-5:00pm

Line Classified Ad Rates
Private Party (Non-Profit) 25 Words.....$20.00/week
Commercial (For-Profit) 25 Words.....$42.50/week
Extra words...25¢/word/day Extra words...25¢/word/day
EXTRAS: Box: $1/day • Bold: $3/day [BR = Bedroom • BA = Bath • mo = month • hr = hour • wk = week • W/D = washer/dryer • OBO = or best offer • AC = air conditioning • w/ = with • LR = living room]

To Place a Line Classified Ad Log Onto
www.dailytarheel.com/classifieds or Call 919-962-0252

Deadlines
Line Ads: Noon, one business day prior to publication
Display Classified Ads: 3pm, two business days prior to publication

Help Wanted

Help Wanted

Help Wanted

Help Wanted

Residential Services, Inc.
Gain Valuable Experience in Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities
Weekend hours are available working with children and adults with developmental disabilities, helping them achieve their personal goals. Gain valuable experience for psychology, sociology, nursing majors, and other related fields. Various shifts available. $10.10/hr.
APPLY ONLINE by visiting us at:
www.rsi-nc.org

Senior Clinical Psychologist
NeuroCog Trials, a rapidly growing company located in Durham with close ties to Duke University Medical Center is seeking a PhD level Clinical Psychologist for clinical cognitive assessment development and data review. Position will assist in developing and validating new test batteries, reviewing, analyzing and interpreting cognitive test data, and will oversee neurocognitive rater certification and data quality control for multi-site pharmaceutical company trials. The area of work will primarily be in Alzheimer's disease, aging, and schizophrenia. These clinical trials usually involve a large number of investigators and testers who require certification. Travel to US or international meetings is expected. Familiarity with cognitive assessment is essential. Requirements: Doctoral degree in Clinical Psychology, neuroscience or related field. Demonstrated experience (in clinical and/or research settings) in working with adult psychiatric populations; experience with Alzheimer's Disease, MCI, Schizophrenia, Depression, Multiple Sclerosis and neurodegenerative disorders; Clinical experience in conducting assessments and administering scales with adult psychiatric populations. Submit resumes and salary requirements to: mailto:hr@neurocogtrials.com

For Rent
FAIR HOUSING
ALL REAL ESTATE AND RENTAL advertising in this newspaper is subject to the Federal Fair Housing Act of 1968 which makes it illegal to advertise "any preference, limitation, or discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, handicap, familial status, or national origin, or an intention to make any such preference, limitation, or discrimination." This newspaper will not knowingly accept any advertising which is in violation of the law. Our readers are hereby informed that all dwellings advertised in this newspaper are available on an equal opportunity basis in accordance with the law. To complain of discrimination, call the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development housing discrimination hotline: 1-800-669-9777.

HOROSCOPES

If October 22nd is Your Birthday...
Friends bring you joy this year. Focus on making money and it comes easily, especially through 12/23. After that, your communications creativity bubbles over. Study, write and film. Contribute to others from your heart. Strengthen foundations at home with love. Springtime work breakthroughs lead to new confidence. Pursue happiness and give it away.

Announcements

The AIDS Course
AIDS: Principles, Practices, Politics
Spring, Tuesday: 5:30-6:50pm
One Credit • Pass Fail
Enroll in Public Health 420
Section 1 (Undergrad) or Section 2 (Graduate)
An hour of credit for a lifetime of knowledge!

Business Opportunities

BARTEND. $20-$35/HR.
100% job placement assistance. Have fun. Make money. Meet people. Enroll today. http://www.cocktailmixer.com/contact-forms/pre-enrollment-form, 919-676-0774.

For Rent

1BR FOR RENT, CHAPEL HILL
4BR condo has 1 room to rent. Private bathroom. Free parking. 2 bus routes to campus. Full kitchen, laundry in unit. Can rent furnished or unfurnished. Available immediately or will consider spring semester. 919-426-3015.

Homes For Sale

CONSIDERING HOMEOWNERSHIP BUT can't afford what you want in town? Our community sponsored non-profit can help. Our homes range in price from $75,000 to $150,000. www.communityhomestore.org. We are a licensed real estate firm. 919-967-1545.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Announcements

NOTICE TO ALL DTH CUSTOMERS
Deadlines are NOON one business day prior to publication for classified ads. We publish Monday thru Friday when classes are in session. A university holiday is a DTH holiday too (i.e. this affects deadlines). We reserve the right to reject, edit, or reclassify any ad. Please check your ad on the first run date, as we are only responsible for errors on the first day of the ad. Acceptance of ad copy or prepayment does not imply agreement to publish an ad. You may stop your ad at any time, but NO REFUNDS or credits for stopped ads will be provided. No advertising for housing or employment, in accordance with federal law, can state a preference based on sex, race, creed, color, religion, national origin, handicap, marital status.
MINDFULNESS AND MEDITATION: Reduce stress, increase concentration. 4 session class designed for young adults starts November 11. Carrboro. $65. Register by 11-4-14. 919-932-6262 ext. 216, http://www.thewellnessalliance.com/BreeKalb.html.
VOTE BY MAIL. NC deadline October 28 to request a ballot by mail. Orange County voters visit www.co.orange.nc.us/elect > click "absentee voting by mail" for details and form. Other NC counties visit ncsbe.gov (all may use form in your official voter guide).

Child Care Wanted

BABYSITTER WANTED IN CARRBORO. Seeking fun, experienced babysitter for afternoons M-Th (2:30-5pm) for son (11) and daughter (12). Safe driving record. BaedgerFamilyNC@gmail.com.
BABYSITTER: Periodic afternoons and date nights. SENIOR or GRAD STUDENT with 1 year commitment, including summer. Non-smoker, babysitting experience required. Clean driving, criminal record. Email experience and availability: Babysit14@hotmail.com.
AFTERSCHOOL SITTER NEEDED for our 1st grade son. Meet at bus stop, help with homework, play. Fun kid! Durham, not far from Duke west campus. 3-5 days/wk. 3:30-6:30pm. Email kfranz2103@gmail.com or call 919-724-8093.
CREATIVE AND ENGAGING? Seeking smart, responsible, UNC upperclassman or graduate student to babysit bright, easygoing 6th grader in Durham's lovely Hope Valley neighborhood. Weekend evenings and occasional weeknights. If you are a current student in good standing, send bio, resume and availability: mpfa2013@icloud.com.

For Sale

MERCIA RESIDENTIAL PROPERTIES: Now showing and leasing properties for 2015-16 school year. Walk to campus, 1BR-6BR available. Contact via merciarentals.com or 919-933-8143.
WALK TO CAMPUS. 2BR/1BA. Fully renovated. W/D. Dishwasher. Central AC, heat. Available immediately. $825/mo. Merciarentals.com, 919-933-8143.
500 PITTSBORO STREET HOUSE. Behind Carolina Inn. Sleeps 10, completely remodeled in 2013, hardwoods, granite, new appliances, $8,000/mo. Designated rooming house, available August 2015. uncrents@carolina.rr.com, 704-408-6839.

Personals

JOE, did you find the condoms I put in your backpack? Do you know how I use them? Take the AIDS Course! AIDS Course, Spring, Wednesdays, 5:45-7pm, one credit. Enroll in Public Health 420, Section 1 (Undergrad) or Section 2 (Graduate). Love, Dad.

Aries (March 21-April 19)

Today is a 9 — Think, and decide what you truly want. Avoid distractions to craft your message. Speak with passion. Honor and appreciate your partner. Wait for results. Focus on short-term goals, mundane chores and routines. Let a false friend go.

Taurus (April 20-May 20)

Today is a 9 — Postpone your shopping trip. Focus on immediate priorities. Let others know what you need. Provide motivation. They come around eventually. Choose staying home with a loved one over going out with friends.

Gemini (May 21-June 20)

Today is a 9 — You're especially creative. Your partner demands attention. Even a disagreement can inspire imagination. Serenity could get disrupted... wait until the dust clears to check the score. Write your report and craft your handiwork. Use your special tools.

Cancer (June 21-July 22)

Today is an 8 — A clash between work and travel requires your attention. Work out the kinks before proceeding. Pay any leftover bills. Let your work worries fade away. Meditate on music or peaceful sounds. Lounge and relax at home.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22)

Today is a 9 — Talk about freedom and justice. Keep digging, and post about breaking news. Pay off bills. Don't speculate with love or money. Share your affections with someone beloved. Let them know how you feel. Relax and enjoy.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Today is a 9 — Compromise is required to work out a deal. Listen to your inner voice first, and observe the situation. Don't fall for an emotional outburst. Evaluate your partner's suggestion. Creative work pays well. Follow up talk with action.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Today is a 9 — You feel energized and confident. Make the changes you want. Check to make sure all the jobs still need to be done. Encourage feedback from folks involved. Mull it over before you respond. Expect your mate to be outspoken.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Today is an 8 — Complete a financial transaction with attention and care, or risk fireworks. Don't force things to fit. Use your most creative logic. You win the prize by taking it slow. Get quiet and thoughtful.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Today is a 9 — Listen to suggestions about your private life, politely. Stand up for yourself, when appropriate. Resolve old issues. You are at your most persuasive. Conditions could shift, so take care. Find out what's really wanted, and hammer out details.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Today is a 9 — Have faith, and keep in action. Don't get stopped by confusion. Review your map, and take small steps to a rise in professional status. Piece together a persuasive puzzle. Handle your side of the bargain.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Today is a 9 — Travel locally rather than long-distance, if you can. You don't need to go far for what you need. Chaos could disrupt things. A brilliant insight could temporarily blind you. The best things in life are still free.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20)

Today is a — Review the numbers, and file papers. Handle short-term tasks and urgencies. Don't take on more than you can handle. Watch out for conflicting orders. Don't forget an important engagement. Share the status with your partner.

(c) 2014 TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES, INC.

★ ALL IMMIGRATION MATTERS ★
Work Visas • Green Cards • Citizenship
REDUCED FEE FOR FACULTY & STUDENTS!
NC Board Certified Attorney Specialist
LISA BRENNAN • 919-932-4593 • visas-us.com

UNC Community

DRUG AND ALCOHOL OFFENSES
Law Office of
Daniel A. Hatley
919.200.0822 • dan@hatleylawoffice.com

Your Ad Could Be Here!
919-962-0252

SERVICE DIRECTORY

STARPOINT STORAGE
NEED STORAGE SPACE?
Safe, Secure, Climate Controlled
 Hwy 15-501 South & Smith Level Road (919) 942-6666

UNC-system happenings

Part of a regular update on UNC-system schools.

Compiled by staff writer Sara Svehla.

Hagan speaks at NC State

Democratic Sen. Kay Hagan spoke to about 40 people at N.C. State University on Monday.

Hagan, who is in a close race with Republican challenger Thom Tillis, discussed education and the importance of preserving federal education funding, such as Pell Grants.

"As far as the education standpoint, there's no question that Kay Hagan's record is what students are in need of," said Ben Stockdale, president of N.C. State College Democrats.

He said he hopes the high level of interest on current issues, especially regarding education, will encourage students to turn out to vote. Early voting begins Thursday.

"Hagan coming today proves that she is a voice of all the people," Stockdale said.

"It's increasingly important that we have someone that stands up for us and realizes that we can't cut programs that finance education."

UNC-G chancellor retires

After seven years in the position, UNC-Greensboro Chancellor Linda P. Brady announced on Monday that she will retire on July 31, 2015.

Brady will become the seventh UNC-system chancellor to step down since spring 2013. She said in a statement that she hopes her early notice will give a search committee adequate time to find a successor.

Brady recently made headlines for allowing the firing of three UNC-G employees, who might now face prison time after being accused of working a second job on university time, according to The News & Record. She said the timing was a coincidence.

The university recently launched an 18-month plan that will prepare UNC-G for 2016 to 2026. Brady said in the statement that it's important for the new chancellor to lead UNC-G through the plan.

During her time at UNC-G, Brady stressed the importance of student success, interdisciplinary research and globalization. She said she looks forward to returning to the classroom.

WCU sponsors war panel

Western Carolina University professor David Dorondo founded the Carolina Roundtable on the World Wars nearly two decades ago — and the tradition will continue today with a World War I event.

The roundtable's primary goal is to educate, and it hosts three talks per semester about both World Wars and the inter-war period of the 20th century, Dorondo said. These discussions have generated interest across North Carolina and nearby regions, such as Georgia and Washington, D.C., especially this year, the 100th anniversary of World War I.

At Wednesday's event, Richard DiNardo, a professor of national security affairs at the Marine Corps University in Quantico, Va., will speak about the military offensive launched by Germany and Austria during World War I on the Eastern Front.

"The roundtable has been a nice and significant success for what we try to do here at Western in terms of reaching out to western North Carolina and expanding our connections with the community," Dorondo said.

Early voting an issue at UNC-C

If students at UNC-Charlotte want to vote in the upcoming midterm election, they will have to walk nearly a mile off campus to the closest voting site.

UNC-C has never had a midterm election voting site on its campus. Students can vote at the University City Regional Library, but Jennifer Byrd, a women's and gender studies lecturer at UNC-C, said it's a trek, and some of the path is not paved.

The Mecklenburg County Board of Elections and the university have discussed having a site on campus, but due to construction and the upcoming homecoming football game on Saturday, they could not find a suitable place for voting.

Byrd has worked with campus groups to arrange shuttles to the library every 20 minutes and is hoping student drivers can transport those without cars to the site.

"Hopefully in four years when the school is even larger, it will be a non-issue at that point," she said.

"So if I can do anything to make that happen, that's a goal."

Celebrating the revolutionary 'Tobe'

Community members gathered to discuss the 75-year-old book.

By Clayton Johnson
Staff Writer

In 1939, a black boy in rural Hillsborough asked his white neighbor why he didn't look like the kids in his storybooks. This question inspired that very neighbor, Stella Gentry Sharpe, to write a book called "Tobe."

UNC is celebrating the 75th anniversary of the historic book, which was published by UNC Press in 1939. The Wilson Special Collections Library hosted a panel discussion Tuesday night and introduced the exhibit, called "Where is Tobe? Unfolding Stories of Childhood, Race and Rural Life in North Carolina," which features the original photographs from the book and the stories of the people depicted in them.

Sharpe's book became one of the first accurate portrayals of black people in American children's literature, complete with photographs by Charles Farrell of life in African-American communities.

Benjamin Filene, director of the public history program at UNC-Greensboro, found the book's photos in the archives of Wilson Library roughly six years ago. Intrigued by the discovery, Filene researched the impact of "Tobe" on the local African-American community. He said it was important for African-Americans to see themselves in literature and be able to identify with characters.

"It was significant in a couple ways," Filene said. "It was trying to offer a dignified portrayal of hard-working, upright, family-minded African-Americans. Connected to that, it was imagining black readers."

Filene contacted various community members from the town of Goshen who were connected to the story. Once interviews were compiled and paired with photographs, he invited them to discuss the impact of "Tobe" at the panel.

"The community at that time was about seven country miles from the city of Greensboro. I remember my mother told me that Goshen was a land of plenty," said the Rev. Ernestine Gray, who was 8 when Farrell used Goshen to capture Tobe's story.

Gray said Goshen was a place where people benefited from plenty of schools, friendly neighbors, church congregations and homegrown food. "I will always remember how close-knit our community was," said Goshen resident Mary Shoffner Anderson-Booker. "We always took care of each other."

Community was a strong discussion point for the panel and is also evident in the images that represent "Tobe." This positive portrayal of African-American life was revolutionary in children's books.

"It was transcending some of the habits, laws, ways people were thinking," Gray said. "I don't think we knew it then, but it was a changer. It was an overcomer."

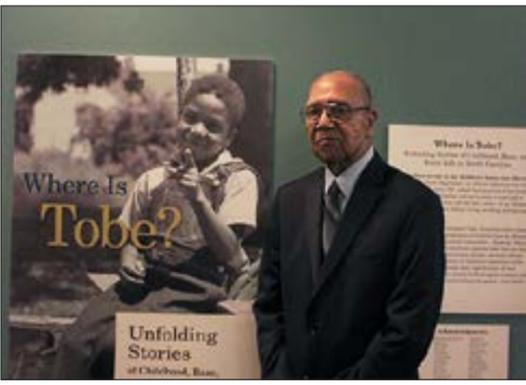

The exhibit features letters between Farrell and the press.

Nearly 200 alternate photos are also on display, as well as a history on children's literature. Clips from Filene's interviews with community members and people involved in the book are also playing for visitors.

"This book did not instantly change or solve this problem. It seems that every generation has to re-fight this fight," Filene said.

arts@dailytarheel.com

DTH/LIETH KHATIB

Charles Garner stands next to the book cover of "Tobe," which features a photograph taken of him as a child, in Wilson library.

BOCC moves closer to county library

The county will negotiate contracts for development.

By Marisa Bakker
Staff Writer

Orange County knows not to judge a mixed-use library by its blueprints.

But on Tuesday, Orange County residents caught a glimpse of the preliminary plans for the library they might see in April 2017, as the Board of County Commissioners approved the county's letter of intent for the Southern Branch Library.

Jeff Thompson, director of asset management services for Orange County, said the Board's approval authorizes the county to begin negotiating the set of contracts for the development.

"There is a need for it, there has been a need for many years and a desire for people to have a library in that location," said Lucinda Munger, Orange County library director.

"What we're trying to do is bring a full range of library services to the area of Carrboro — currently we don't," she said.

Munger said such services would include a full staff, full book collection and an abundance of programming opportunities — all services that she said the other two Orange County libraries are unable to provide.

The prospective library would be a mixed-use space, with the library and office space on the first floor and single-family apartments on the other four floors, according to the letter of intent.

"There will be other things happening besides a stand-alone library, which is interesting, and it's exciting, and it's something that may bring a different flavor for the Southern Branch Library," Thompson said.

"We will have a built-in audience for the library," Munger said.

Main Street Properties of Chapel Hill, LLC is the intended developer of the project. The group also developed the 300 East Main property adjacent to the lot proposed for the library and plans to integrate the two.

"If that site is built, it will be seamless," Thompson said. "The whole thing will look like one developed property."

A rough estimate projects the cost of the development will be around $8.9 million. Included in the budget are

LIBRARY PLANNING

$8.9 million

Estimated cost of the library development

$25,000

Estimated cost of legal fees for finalizing library contract

April 2017

Prospective opening date

expenditures including land, professional services, construction equipment and furnishings, Thompson said.

The county conducted a public outreach series from January to May 2014, and the public was invited to give feedback for the project.

"Over 200 people enthusiastically loved the idea of a library," said Munger.

Munger said public opinion of the project has been positive because the library will serve low-income communities and offer urban library services.

"This is a county facility, and we welcome anyone to use it," she said. "It's an opportunity to do something unique for a very unique and vibrant community."

city@dailytarheel.com

BUY A COUCH • FIND A JOB • DITCH YOUR ROOMMATE

www.dailytarheel.com/classifieds

we're here for you. all day, every day

SELL YOUR CAR • FIND A SITTING • VOLUNTEER

games SUDOKU
THE SKAKIN OF PUZZLES By The Mephams Group
© 2014 The Mephams Group. All rights reserved.

Level: 1 2 3 4

		7			6	2
5
9		7	4	3
4		1					9
			8
3		9		2				6
			2	9		6
			3			5
		8	5			4

Complete the grid so each row, column and 3-by-3 box (in bold borders) contains every digit 1 to 9.

Solution to Tuesday's puzzle

4	1	6	8	2	7	5	3	9
9	5	8	1	4	3	2	7	6
7	3	2	9	6	5	4	8	1
5	2	3	6	9	4	8	1	7
6	9	1	2	7	8	3	4	5
8	7	4	3	5	1	6	9	2
1	6	9	4	8	2	7	5	3
2	8	7	5	3	9	1	6	4
3	4	5	7	1	6	9	2	8

Nostalgia for the '90s
Love of the 1990s is trendy, and a club at UNC has formed around it. See pg. 1 for story.

Scandal survey
The Daily Tar Heel surveyed 102 freshmen about their perception of the scandal. See pg. 5 for graphic.

Feminist critique
Bay Buchanan spoke at UNC Tuesday and criticized modern feminism. See pg. 1 for story.

Stipend debate
The Student Congress debated the fairness of student government stipends. See pg. 5 for story.

APPLICATION DEADLINE:
Friday, October 24

TEACHFORAMERICA
Full salary and benefits.
A.L. academic majors.
www.teachforamerica.org

Los Angeles Times Daily Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS

- Snoop's former "surname"
- Sinatra's "The Lady Is a ..."
- Fine
- Polynesian capital
- ... roll
- Hard-to-explain feeling
- Bird between the partridge and French hen
- Exile isle
- In dreamland
- Smashes to smithereens
- Pique condition?
- Univ. aides
- Jamaican music
- Species of falcon also called an American kestrel
- Boot parts
- ...Ball: arcade game
- "I'm not kidding!"
- Dreads sporter
- What's always in poetry?
- "... So Vain": Carly Simon hit
- Sci-fi regular
- Optic layer
- Feds under Ness
- Epic novel symbolized by the ends of 17- and 29-Across
- Future 32-Down: Abbr.
- "Go for the Goal" author Hamm
- Sales rep's tool
- Gym gear
- Musical ineptitude
- 1998 Sarah McLachlan hit
- Author of 47-Across
- Witty remark
- 67 Pasty
- Italian volcano
- Egyptian symbol of life
- Garden path piece
- After-school mall frequenter
- Crunched stuff
- Magnum ...
- Lass
- "Pirates of Silicon Valley" figure
- 5 Knight crew?
- 6 Bit of fishing tackle
- 7 Give ...to: okay
- 8 Relocate
- 9 Magic word
- 10 Miss, as an intended target
- 11 Roughly 2.2 pounds, briefly
- First name in advice
- Votes for
- 18 Eyepiece piece
- 22 Lion-colored
- 24 Start, as a new hobby
- 26 Camel's undoing
- 27 Tree-dwelling marsupial
- 28 Pantheon led by Odin
- 30 Superman player
- 31 Enjoy again, as a cherished book
- 32 Ones who no longer have class?
- 33 Cable installer, at times
- 34 Wails
- 36 Post-workout relaxation spot
- 40 Musical set in an orphanage
- 45 Salon solvent
- 48 Texas city that spans five counties
- 49 Oscar winner Jannings
- 53 Start
- 54 ... California
- 55 Yemen port city
- 56 Put on the line
- 57 For fear that
- 58 Artsy
- Manhattan district
- 60 Cigar butt?
- 61 Primo
- 62 Meg of "Sleepless in Seattle"
- 65 Down-for-the-count count

©2014 Tribune Media Services, Inc. All rights reserved.

The Daily Tar Heel

Established 1893, 121 years of editorial freedom

JENNY SURANE EDITOR, 962-4086 OR EDITOR@DAILYTARHEEL.COM
 HENRY GARGAN OPINION EDITOR, OPINION@DAILYTARHEEL.COM
 SAM SCHAEFER ASSISTANT OPINION EDITOR

EDITORIAL BOARD MEMBERS

BAILEY BARGER PETER VOGEL KERN WILLIAMS
 BRIAN VAUGHN KIM HOANG COLIN KANTOR

Ishmael Bishop
Color Commentary

Junior mathematics and English major from Wilson
 Email: ishmaelbg@gmail.com

How to win on the margins

Current poll numbers show that black, Latino and female voters will ultimately decide the upcoming U.S. Senate race between incumbent Democratic Sen. Kay Hagan, Republican state House Speaker Thom Tillis and Libertarian candidate Sean Haugh.

Assuming the candidates are intelligent and have a social conscience, this means that during the next few days, their respective camps should be heavily pursuing strategies for appealing to these marginalized groups. It's fitting that the state's most historically marginalized communities now understand that they hold the keys to the state's political future.

Already, mud has been slung in two particular directions. Hagan has employed a standard broadcasting approach, campaigning to predominantly black listeners through radio ads, which has led to criticism of her "last minute radio ads," according to McClatchy.

Republicans see the tactic of appealing to underrepresented groups of people as shallow. Instead, Republicans say they want to open their conversation to minority groups and receive feedback pertaining to job growth, the economy and education. By doing this, Republicans hope to earn the confidence of these groups, whom they imagine will feel self-empowered to vote a Republican into office on their own accord.

In states like North Carolina, members of growing black and Latino/a populations are more likely to vote in favor of a candidate with a history of supporting social and financial progressiveness that bridges social and income disparities.

Currently, Democrats are in the process of meeting with members of black and Latino/a communities after church services to provide general election-day information and answer their questions. The dialogue happening in these spaces is crucial to the success of the Democrats.

It can be assumed that whoever controls this vote will also control the outcome of the Senate election. If Tillis were to win office, the two-house Republican majority would have the ability to establish a collective and symbolic effort toward stripping President Barack Obama of his executive powers.

Women will also turn out in massive numbers this election as the debate surrounding abortion rights and access to affordable health care becomes more heated.

A recent poll conducted by Public Policy Polling showed Hagan leading Tillis with women 49 percent to 37 percent, and with African-American-identified voters 85 percent to 4 percent. Tillis leads with white voters, men and senior citizens.

If for some reason, Tillis were to skirt by and win against Hagan, marginalized folks, including youth, LGBT persons and poor and working-class mothers will not see their interests represented in the Senate.

These overwhelming divides show a clear and very steady front-runner among marginalized groups. How voters and candidates respond to this data will determine the future of the state of for years to come.

EDITORIAL CARTOON By Matt Pressley, mdp924@live.unc.edu

EDITORIAL

Spying is a 2-way street

Undisclosed data collection betrays public trust.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg police department conducts regular cellphone and laptop device surveillance on Charlotte citizens — and has done so for eight years now, according to The Charlotte Observer. The American Civil Liberties Union has said it suspects other N.C. cities have acted similarly.

The lack of transparency regarding the use of such equipment threatens the basic constitutional protection against unreasonable search and seizure. Federal law does not require a warrant for metadata surveillance, but the state's legislators should.

Police have recorded the location of devices and serial numbers from perpetrators and innocent people alike. Charlotte's police claim there is no content surveillance and that metadata isn't stored.

Mecklenburg Senior Resident Superior Court Judge Richard Boner estimates he has approved hundreds of requests to use the equipment and has never turned down one request, according to the Charlotte Observer. Such blanket permissiveness is cause for concern.

Police departments are federally barred from disclosing information about surveillance practices. The U.S. Department of Justice has reasoned that such information is already available to service providers and therefore is not legally considered "search and seizure," citing the 1979 supreme court case Smith v. Maryland.

This argument is dated and undemocratic. By the same logic, the government could conceivably justify screening information given to a physician, an employer or posted to Facebook, simply because it is voluntarily given to a third party.

Such practices make one wonder why the government should be given such transparency into our lives if the favor is not returned.

EDITORIAL

Athletes should unionize

UNC athletes should accept an offer to join the SEANC.

Nationally and locally, an awakening is slowly taking place to the unbalanced relationship between universities involved in big-time athletics and the athletes who make the industry work.

In August, a judge opened the door for the payment of athletes in the case of O'Bannon v. NCAA.

And at home, the State Employees Association of North Carolina has invited scholarship athletes to join the organization.

But so far, no athletes in the UNC system have elected to sign up. To take a first step to combat the injustices inherent in the NCAA's model, and to empower themselves with a political voice, we suggest that athletes at UNC accept the SEANC's invitation.

Athletes who join the SEANC would immediately be given a voice in an organization that employs professional lobbyists and has expressed interest in representing athletes' interests. As things are, almost all power in the relationship lies with the NCAA and its member schools.

Joining the SEANC would not alter this essential dynamic for athletes, but it would give them an avenue to voice their concerns outside of structures set up by the NCAA and universities, which have a vested interest in preserving the status quo.

Athletes can take an important first step to empowering themselves to tackle some of the fundamental injustices of college athletics in a way the NCAA and its member universities have been reluctant to pursue.

GUEST COLUMN

Developing a game plan

Entrepreneurship combines hard work and play. Here's how.

At a lively networking event, I asked a fellow entrepreneur why he decided to start his own business. He chuckled. "It was two words from my boss: you're fired."

Of course getting fired might get you thinking about becoming an entrepreneur, but it takes more than that to make it a reality. An entrepreneur is someone who takes the initiative and assumes the risk to organize and manage a venture. Drive, risk-taking, innovation and a strong work ethic are common to successful entrepreneurs. There are some other basic steps one can take to make the goal of starting a venture a reality.

At the heart of any successful business is a great idea. They can range from the annoyingly simple (the Snuggie) to the rather complex (therapeutics and vaccines). You can find inspiration by brainstorming

Julian Wooten
A Triangle Business Journal 2013 Top 40 Under 40 Entrepreneur from Chapel Hill.
Email: julian@stencilventure.com

about what societal needs are not being met and then developing a solution to meet one of those needs.

Once you have an idea, draft a business plan. It's a tool that entrepreneurs can use to help focus them in the right direction for their venture. It will allow you to get all your ideas on paper and address any holes in your thinking. Remember, the plan is a dynamic document meant to serve as a guide, not a leash. As your venture develops, so will your business plan.

While you forge your idea, the aspiring entrepreneur will benefit from discussing his or her thoughts with someone. These talks can lead to valuable feedback that will help to refine your venture. Don't be afraid to have a conversation. You're going to have to talk about your idea at some point, and the sooner the better. Other entrepreneurs can be a great sounding board, and you could find a mentor.

Finding a good mentor can save you a lot of blood, sweat and tears. Seek out someone you admire, or who has significant relevant experience, and ask for guidance. You'll be surprised at how generous established entrepreneurs can be with their time.

Launching a venture can seem daunting, but these steps will put you on the right path. Becoming an entrepreneur is a learning experience fueled by hard work and innovation. Start something. You'll be glad you did.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"We've all come from these crazy different backgrounds ... but there are these cultural landmarks that we hold onto..."

Cozy Brents, WXYC promotional director

FEATURED ONLINE READER COMMENT

"Binge drinking is a rite of passage. It may not be a source of pride, but almost all of us ... somehow become productive citizens."

NClaw441, on Provost Jim Dean's efforts to curb binge drinking

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Discuss NC education at tonight's event

TO THE EDITOR:

As UNC students, we have many opportunities open to us. In our time here, we have attended speaker events with Michelle Obama and Bill Nye, rushed Franklin Street after a Tar Heel win, traveled all around the world and participated in events like Dance Marathon and Holi Moli.

This is all on top of our daily opportunities to learn from experienced professors, engage in robust discussion with our classmates and enjoy the perks of spending four years on a stimulating college campus.

But too many kids growing up in North Carolina won't get the chance to experience what we have. A quarter of North Carolina children are growing up in poverty, and many of them lack the opportunities and resources they'll need to complete high school and go on to college or a high-skilled vocation or career.

The opportunity gap befalling these students is stark, but education leaders across North Carolina are working hard to expand opportunities for low-income students and ensure that all our state's students are receiving a high-quality education.

Three of these leaders will join us in the Great Hall on Oct. 22: Eric Guckian from the North Carolina Department of Education; Professor Tim McMillan from the Department of African, African-American and Diaspora Studies; and Robyn Schryer Fehrman from Teach For America's Eastern North Carolina senior staff.

They will talk about the challenges and triumphs of North Carolina's education system, discuss the work they've done and have left to do and engage with current Tar Heels about ways we can all help. It's an opportunity we shouldn't pass up.

The "Education Speaks" event will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 22 in the Great Hall of the Student Union at 6 p.m. All are welcome, and food will be provided.

Rachel Gogal
Junior
Journalism
Political science

Wainstein money not pure profit

TO THE EDITOR:

Once again, The Daily Tar Heel has misstated how businesses operate: This time, billable hours.

If UNC pays $990 per hour to Kenneth Wainstein, and between $450 and $775 an hour for members of his team, they themselves are not making that full amount. Mr. Wainstein is a partner at Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft, so when UNC pays "him," they are actually paying the firm for his services.

The firm bills out by the hour for the members of his team, and that company treats it as revenue, from which it pays its associates and partners. Any profit left over after paying for overhead is then shared through the partners, of which I suspect Mr. Wainstein receives some portion.

And the annual total is likely more than many students live off of in the time it takes them to complete their course of study, growing tuition included. But it is not the same $990 per hour reported here.

But as reported in the last story on the subject, The Daily Tar Heel might as well claim that the grocery clerk made about $100 when I checked out at his register last week. Revenue is paid to the company, not the individual.

Scott Neidich
Doctoral student,
School of public health

Feeding the 5000 highlights food waste

TO THE EDITOR:

There has been a lot of attention lately to food issues on campus, demonstrated by the DTH Food Issue, interest in food-centered clubs and increased overall discussion. Oftentimes these discussions focus on increased production or accessibility. These are two highly important topics, but an often-overlooked one is food waste.

This is not a light topic. Today, over 40 percent of food produced in America is being wasted. That waste can produce rotting in the fields due to cosmetic imperfections, day-old bread from the market or the unfinished leftovers resting in the back of your mini fridge.

This Wednesday, Carolina Dining Services is hosting the second Feeding the 5,000 event to be held in North America. This event will feed 5,000 people a meal entirely made from food that would otherwise be wasted. The free meal will be served in the Pit and Top of Lenoir. Furthermore, the founder of Feeding the 5,000, Tristram Stuart, will be giving a talk with Jonathan Bloom, a local food waste writer and expert, on food waste that evening.

Through this event, CDS has helped to bring together many student organizations all focused on environmentalism and food. Come out, enjoy free food, learn about food waste and make history as UNC holds the first ever Feeding the 5,000 event on a college campus worldwide!

Alexandria Huber
Sophomore
Environmental science

SPEAK OUT

WRITING GUIDELINES

- Please type. Handwritten letters will not be accepted.
- Sign and date. No more than two people should sign letters.
- Students: Include your year, major and phone number.
- Faculty/staff: Include your department and phone number.
- Edit: The DTH edits for space, clarity, accuracy and vulgarity. Limit letters to 250 words.

SUBMISSION

- Drop off or mail to our office at 151 E. Rosemary St., Chapel Hill, NC 27514
- Email: opinion@dailytarheel.com

EDITOR'S NOTE: Columns, cartoons and letters do not necessarily represent the opinions of The Daily Tar Heel or its staff. Editorials reflect the opinions of The Daily Tar Heel editorial board, which comprises six board members, the opinion assistant editor and editor and the editor-in-chief.