Crouching Tiger, Hidden Owner

From staff and wire reports

Last week, a man walking his dog left a stuffed tiger on a field in the United Kingdom, prompting attention from police, who said they thought the tiger was real. Kevin Blunden, 53, took the “tiger” into a field for his dog Saski, 5, to play with and left it after the dog lost interest.

After leaving the stuffed animal in the field, police and zoo staff and a helicopter were called for and a local golf course was evacuated. The thermal imaging gear of the helicopter showed no heat being emitted from the stuffed tiger and the wind from the aircraft blew the toy over.

NOTED. A woman from Tampa, Fla., was arrested for beating her one-year-old child for eating her marijuana. Tampa police said 22-year-old India Couch is facing drug charges and child abuse charges. Investigators said the child found the marijuana in Couch’s purse.

QUOTED. “It’s making the baby use its heart on its own in the first place.” — Charlie Wilcox, 20, who said she smoked 3,500 cigarettes while pregnant. Wilcox said she thought if she stopped smoking, the change would put the baby under dangerous stress.
