

PARK TO RECEIVE VISITOR CENTER

When North Carolina voters took to the polls March 15 they voted by a nearly 2-to-1 margin in favor of the Connect NC bond referendum. Aimed at infusing $2 billion into upgrading education in science and math, the state university system, zoo and parks, the first round of projects resulting from the bond have been announced and Lake James State Park is on the list.

With an allowance of more than $3 million for the project through the bond and other sources, Park Superintendent Nora Coffey said she is grateful to the voters who supported state parks through the bond and looks forward to repaying their commitment with a visitor center that will reflect the beauty and diversity of the areas surrounding Lake James.

"We are not going to settle for anyone's cookie-cutter idea of what a park visitor center should look like," she said.

"The building will be designed to embrace and celebrate the tremendous opportunities for outdoor recreation, the richness in natural resources and the fascinating history of the land before and after Lake James was created."

Though the exact site has yet to be determined, the new visitor center will be located in the Paddy's Creek Area, with approximately 6,500 square feet housing exhibits, multipurpose/meeting rooms, office space, retail and receptionist areas and restrooms. The design team will be looking to incorporate the building with the park's existing and future trail system and act as a hub for visitors to access a wide variety of outdoor recreation opportunities.

Once the funds become available later this year the design process will begin. If all goes as planned the project will open for bid by the end of 2017 with an eye toward 2018 for completion.

If you would like to receive our monthly programs list, contact us at lake.james@ncparks.gov. In an effort to reduce idle waiting time before programs begin, please make an effort to arrive a few minutes early before the start times listed. Thank you.

SPRING BIRD HIKE – MONDAY, MAY 9

Spring migrants are still trickling through the Piedmont while many nesters are already on territory. It's a great time to go birding at Lake James State Park. Park Ranger Jamie Cameron will start the hike along the Overmountain Victory Trail at 8 a.m. to catch the morning chorus and see the greatest variety, including northern parulas, Louisiana waterthrushes, red-eyed vireos and scarlet tanagers. Bring binoculars and a field guide if you have them and be prepared to hike 1 mile over relatively easy terrain. We will start from the Holly Discovery Trail parking lot in the Paddy's Creek Area.

The program will happen near the bathhouse so bring your camp chairs and prepare to learn about amphibians. The program will start at 7 p.m. so don't be late!

LONG ARM CEMETERY TOUR – SUNDAY, MAY 15

It has been many years since members of the public have had the opportunity to visit the historic cemetery on Long Arm Peninsula. Before the area became part of Lake James State Park in 2005 it was long held in private ownership. As new park facilities are developed to access and enjoy this beautiful area, the park staff is excited to provide a rare opportunity to walk among the tombstones. Meet Ranger Clay Veasey at the Paddy's Creek Area bathhouse breezeway at 9 a.m. and we'll caravan to the cemetery from there.

Those efforts are starting to pay off and the pollinator gardens around the day use portion of the Paddy's Creek Area are a showplace for butterflies, bees and a host of other insects that are critical to the health of our flowering and fruiting plant communities. Park Ranger Jamie Cameron will lead this tour of the gardens – discussing the different plants and how they are utilized by the insect community. Meet at the Paddy's Creek Area bathhouse breezeway at 2 p.m.

NATURE NOTES

We might have missed out on the April showers, but there's no shortage of May flowers. It's a wonderful time of year to hike some of Lake James State Park's trails and enjoy the beauty and diversity of blooms. Among the many wildflowers within the park, windflower, foam flower, pink lady's slipper, chickweed, bellwort and pinxter azalea are just a few. Different species flower at different times throughout the spring and summer, so repeat hikes will reveal the most diversity. The Fox Den Loop Trail at the Catawba River Area is perhaps the best spot for wildflowers within the park.

Several areas of the park received prescribed burns earlier in the year (see related story) and it will be very interesting to monitor the response by animals, birds and plants as time goes by. Visitors can walk through the burned areas at the west end of the Paddy's Creek and Homestead trails in the Paddy's Creek Area, as well as view the smaller, 40-acre burn unit along the north side of the park road between Obeth Cemetery and the Green Cabin field.

Wild turkeys are winding down their breeding season and females are hatching young. The little puffballs (called poults) grow quickly and will soon be the size of chickens. Life can be pretty hard for young turkeys. Seems like every predator in the forest wants to eat them. Broods that started out with 8-10 poults are often whittled down quickly and the average survival rate to adulthood is less than two from every nest.

With water temperatures rising steadily, fish are coming into the shallows. Along the shoreline and from the park's fishing piers folks can see (and catch) largemouth and smallmouth bass, bluegill, lake shad, carp and lots of small, juvenile fishes of several different types.

Activity in the park is heating up and these are great days to get out and enjoy the outdoors before the summer swelter takes hold. See you out on the trail!

CENTENNIAL SPOTLIGHT

As you kick back in your beach chair, watching the sunshine glimmer off tranquil Lake James, our nation's independence may not be the first thing on your mind. During the latter half of the 18th Century, these mountains surrounding you were home to a group of 2,000 frontiersmen who marched to Kings Mountain, N.C. and into a battle that helped turn the tide of the Revolutionary War. Their arduous trek in pursuit of an invading British column led by General Lord Cornwallis passed through what is now Lake James and is commemorated by the Overmountain Victory Trail. The National Park Service's Overmountain Victory National Historic Trail runs from Abingdon, Virginia and Elkin, North Carolina, where patriots gathered to take up the chase. From these two points the trail runs south through Lake James and joins at Morganton, N.C., eventually terminating at Kings Mountain, where the battle was waged. With their victory at Kings Mountain these "Overmountain Men," are said to have broken the stalemate between the colonies and England.

The Revolutionary War started on April 19, 1775. Five years into the fighting the British army shifted its sights to the southern campaign, taking Charlestown, S.C. and eventually occupying most of South Carolina and Georgia. In September of 1780 the British southern army, led by Cornwallis in South Carolina, continued its siege on the South and started to focus on The Old North State.

As the British army was moved northwest toward North Carolina, the Overmountain Men mustered and were on the move to head off Cornwallis and his invading troops. On Oct. 7, 1780, the Overmountain Men defeated Lord Cornwallis' troops at the Battle of Kings Mountain, a battle the British had been heavily favored to win.

After the battle, the Revolutionary War went on for nearly three more years until it ended on Sept. 3, 1783. While there were many more battles fought up and down the Atlantic Coast states, the Battle of Kings Mountain is still remembered as one of the most, if not the most influential battles in the outcome of the Revolutionary War. Frontiersmen marched from their homesteads to head off the invading British force, and against long odds, won a decisive battle to help turn the tide of the war for our freedom.

In his letter to John Campbell, Thomas Jefferson wrote, "The victory at King's Mountain was the joyful annunciation of that turn of the tide of success which terminated the Revolutionary War, with the seal of our independence."

So the next time you find yourself out on one of the park trails, take a moment or two to stop and reflect. Try to imagine yourself as one of those brave Overmountain Men, walking away from your homestead through the lands that would become Lake James State Park and towards a war for our independence.

PARK CELEBRATES SUCCESSFUL FIRE SEASON

After sitting on the sidelines during the 2015 fire season due to uncooperative weather and conflicting operational needs, Lake James State Park staff and partners got significant portions of the Paddy's Creek Area into the prescribed burning rotation during the early part of this year.

Lake James and many other parks across the state system utilize prescribed fire to accomplish several safety and management goals. The use of low- to medium-intensity fire allows the removal of combustible materials on the forest floor. During periods without natural fire events, dead tree limbs, fallen logs, leaf litter and organic materials accumulate. These materials can provide the fuels to feed uncontrollable wildfires during extreme weather conditions. Fire also removes some pioneering tree species that otherwise choke out opportunities for native, fire-adapted landscapes that include white oak, hickory, shortleaf and Table Mountain pines.

With assistance and expertise from the North Carolina Forest Service, the first area to feel the heat was a 67-acre unit at the west end of the Paddy's Creek Trail in January. Weather conditions and thick understory vegetation made this a low-intensity burn, creating a mosaic of fire affects across the unit. Hikers along the Paddy's Creek and Homestead trails will be able to see the immediate effects of the fire and track its long-term implications on the health of the forest during the years to come.

In February, the park successfully completed its largest prescribed burn to date – a 470-acre unit on the Long Arm Peninsula. Because of its size and rugged terrain, the N.C. Forest Service once again provided invaluable help in the form of one of their helicopters and crews. Aerial ignition from the helicopter, along with focused efforts by a team with drip torches aboard one of the park boats made for a very successful day that benefit wildlife habitat on the peninsula for years to come and guard against catastrophic wildfires originating in the boat-in camping areas.

To finish out the season in March, the park conducted an “in house” burn on a 40-acre unit on the north side of the Paddy's Creek Area entrance road. Though it was relatively small in area, this was the highest intensity burn of the year. Careful monitoring of this unit as it recovers in the months and years to come will provide natural resource managers and regional biologists with data that will guide future planning for prescribed fires across N.C. Parks and Recreation's West District.

FAMILIAR FACE: LISA CRANE

When it comes to running a state park that hosts more than half a million visitors a year, there's a lot of behind-the-scenes work occurring to ensure everyone has a great day. Sure Lake James has a full staff of rangers and maintenance mechanics, along with around 20 summer seasonal workers, making sure things work and folks are safe, but each and every one of them will readily admit the park office assistant is the glue that holds it all together.

Lisa Crane came to Lake James during June of last year and took the baton as resident fixer and doer of all that needs doing. In addition to keeping track of budgets, filing paperwork, filling out reports and ordering goods and materials for the park, Lisa is the voice most people hear when they call with questions.

A native of Philadelphia, Lisa worked for 13 years with the Vermont state parks system; starting out as a park attendant and moving through the ranks to park ranger before moving to North Carolina in 2010. From 2010 until 2014 she served as the office assistant at Mount Mitchell State Park before transferring to Lake James.

"I've always loved working in parks," she said. "I've always appreciated that parks exist for all of us to enjoy. Everyone needs nature in their lives."

The next time you find yourself at the Catawba River Area office or calling the park with a question, be sure to let Lisa know you appreciate her hard work and dedication. Without her and others in similar positions throughout the North Carolina state parks system, the overall park experience wouldn't be nearly as nice.

SUPER VOLUNTEER: AUDREY ELLIOT

During the last few months, young Audrey Elliot has been working diligently with park staff to complete her SHINE project. Nebo Elementary's SHINE project requires their students to give back to their communities through service. Fortunately for Lake James and its visitors, Audrey has chosen to give back to the state park. Audrey has helped renovate several stations on the Holly Discovery Trail and spent several hours picking up trash from along the trails and lakeshore. Audrey's favorite activity at the park is looking for Bigfoot on her favorite trail, the Fox Den Loop. She and her family visit the park often, so if you see them on the trails, make sure to thank her for making Lake James State Park a better place for all of us.
