

CURRENT STUDENTS GIVE THEIR WORDS OF WISDOM

“I think it’s important not to get caught up in declaring a major. Just take more general classes to see what you like.”

Kasey Newman, junior management and society major

“I wish I would have known the small details. I didn’t know at first that there was more than one library. I also didn’t know how to print stuff, or where anything was.”

Sarah McQuaid, junior nursing major

“Everybody put a lot of emphasis on trying to go to grad school straight after undergrad; that you really have to kill yourself within four years. That’s not true.”

Hunter Davis, senior history major

“One of the things I would most want to know about before coming here was all about the clubs and all the things you can join.”

Nicholas Trever, freshman biology major

“I wish I knew this would be the hardest four years of my life.”

Stephen Hedrick, senior exercise and sport science major

“The seniors are more welcoming than you think, so they will help you out with anything they can. Also the schoolwork is not as hard as everyone makes it out to be. It is more work than in high school but there’s also more time to do the work, so it teaches you valuable lessons on how to manage your time.”

Will Cathey, senior psychology major

HOLI MOL!

DTH FILE/NIVI UMASANKAR

On Friday, March 23, the Hindu festival, Holi, was celebrated by over a thousand students in the Lower Quad. UNC celebrates this South Asian spring festival by letting students run around the quad throwing colored powder and water at each other.
