Jonas baby subject of ad

From staff and wire reports

Ah, is there any better way to introduce your newborn into a world filled with commercialism than through a sponsored Tweet? Former boy band member Kevin Jonas and his wife Danielle know what’s up. Shortly after their daughter Alena Rose was born Feb. 2, the couple quickly took to Instagram posting a bizarre series of advertisements for Dreft laundry detergent featuring photos of their bundle of joy.

“Love using @Dreft as we prepare for Baby Girl! Follow @Dreft for exclusive content from our growing family! #BabyJonas #DreftAmazing Baby Days,” Kevin Jonas wrote on Twitter. Glad you could share your baby’s first moments on your phone and not at your wife’s bedside.

NOTED. Who needs a date for Valentine’s Day when you have your alarm clock? OK, maybe that sounds awful, but one company wants to change that with its hybrid vibrator/alarm clock, Wake-Up Vibe.

Set the timer, put in your underwear and prepared to be jolted awake. Well, you get it. Alright, then.

QUOTED. “... Your nature perforated the abrasive organ pumps/ Spray painted everything known to man ...”

— Actress Kristen Stewart astounds the world with a bit of her poem, entitled “My Heart Is A Wiffle Ball/Freedom Pole.” No one really knows what all of it means, but it’s certainly provocative.
